INDIANAN LOSES PLEA IN SENATE FOR DEBTS VOTE

BRITISH AMBASSADOR OFF FOR STUDY SOON

(Associated Press.)

An attempt to place Congress once again on record against reduction of the war debts was headed last night toward a Senate committee pigeonhole, with the Democratic leadership anxious that it stay there.

It was offered to the Senate yesterday, accompanied by loud criticism of Thursday's visit of the British Ambassador to the Senate floor in violation of the rules. For the third time in a week it brought a verbal clash between the Senate's two Robinsons.

The ambassador, Sir Ronald Lindsay, it became known soon afterward, will leave Tuesday for London to familiarize himself with the war debt negotiation intentions of his government, and to report his information concerning the March discussion which President-elect Roosevelt will hold with a British delegation.

Tugwell on Visit.

Preparations for this event went on quietly yesterday at the State Department where Prof. Rexford G. Tugwell, an adviser of the President-elect, made a round of visits to department experts and technicians. Prof. Raymond Moley, another adviser, also was discussing these matters with Government officials, but both kept exceedingly quiet about their work.

Ambassador Lindsay's name was brought into Senate debate by Robinson, of Indiana, who, in presenting a resolution reaffirming the congressional policy against debt revision adopted more than a year ago, charged that the other Robinson, the Democartic leader, had run afoul of the Senate rules by bringing Sir Ronald Lindsay onto the floor.

The Arkansas senator calmly admitted he had made a mistake, but said it was a social visit in which international debts had played no part.

Seeks Immediate Vote.

The Indiana Republican sought an immediate vote on his antirevision resolution, but the Democratic chief forced it over under the rules and reiterated that Congress could not stop the President or President-elect from neogtiations with the British and other nations who have met their payments and who desire to discuss further payments with the United States.

Referring to newspaper reports that the British Ambassador had been invited into the chamber and had carried on an effort for debt reduction there, Robinson, of Indiana, said:

"I submit a foreign embassador has no right on the floor of the Senate. Everyone knows his chief interest is

Navy Officer Dying, 3 Maimed in Accident

Oakland, Calif., Jan. 27 (A.P.).—Three naval officers and a civilian student were injured, one perhaps fatally, as a balance wheel of a new type of high speed engine shattered during a test here today. Lieut. Charles E. McDonald, 30, was the most seriously injured and was reported near death at Highland Hospital.

He was appointed to the United States Naval Academy from Winnsboro, S. C., and was graduated in 1923.

Lieut. Kenneth Charles Hurd, 29, was also seriously injured and was reported in a critical condition.

The three naval officers were members of a group of 29 graduates of the United States Naval Academy taking postgraduate work in mechanical engineering at the University of California. Accompanied by five civilian students they went to the plant of a gas engine company to see the new engine demonstrated. As they watched, the balance wheel suddenly flew apart, shooting fragments into the crowd of spectators.

Charles A. Winslow, general manager of the plant where the demonstration took place, said he did not know what caused the flywheel to burst. He said the engine had been running for a week and was idling when the wheel went to pieces, although earlier it had been running at a much greater speed.

Hurd came here from Ann Arbor, Mich. Sharp was appointed to the academy from Montana. They also were graduated in 1923.

R. F. C. LOAN PROBE BY SENATE LIKELY

Couzens Favors Inquiry and Says Two Reports on Dawes Bank Differ.

(Associated Press.)

A broad Senate investigation of the Reconstruction Corporation's loans to railroads is in the offing as the result of a proposal yesterday that further advances to the carriers be prohibited.

Senator Couzens (Republican), Michigan, submitted a resolution to bring this about and followed it up with an assertion that the R. F. C. report to the House and the one made to him earlier, as chairman of a special Senate investigating committee, differed on the details of the much-discussed loan to the Dawes Bank of Chicago.

The resolution was referred to the Senate Banking Committee, and Chairman Norbeck assured Couzens he would appoint a subcommittee promptly. The Michigan senator, who would head it, said if that was done, he would begin hearings next Tuesday.

Couzens, chairman of the Interstate Commerce Committee, told the Senate many of the railroads were in distress and said the Government could not

Six Adrift at Sea Saved by Steamer

Norfolk, Va., Jan. 27 (A.P.).—Five men and one woman were rescued today from the decks of three barges, drifting helplessly at sea off the Virginia coast, by the Eastern Steamship Lines steamer Norwalk, it was reported to Coast Guard headquarters here.

The Norwalk, bound from Richmond to New York, sighted the barges Charles R. Shaw and Maurice Shaw, 16 miles south of Assateague, while she was making her way up the coast.

The barges were showing distress signals. The Norwalk drew alongside the barge Maurice Shaw and rescued two men and one woman. From these survivors, the skipper of the Norwalk learned that the Charles R. Shaw was in the vicinity and the steamer circled around until the distress signals of that craft were sighted. Three men were taken off that craft.

Authority on Railroads Is Killed by Train

Pittsburgh, Jan. 27 (A.P.).—Dr. Howard C. Kidd, internationally known railroad authority, was killed today by a train while walking in a rainstorm through the Pennsylvania Railroad's yards at Pitcairn, near Pittsburgh.

Dr. Kidd, professor of commerce in the University of Pittsburgh School of Business Administration, visited J. W. Fike, assistant trainmaster of the yards today. He left Fike's office about 4 o'clock and was found dead an hour later on the tracks by a trainman.

Another Charge Added To Martin Insull List

Toronto, Jan. 27 (A.P.).—Martin J. Insull, former utilities operator, wanted on embezzlement and larceny charges, in Chicago, was technically rearrested today and the extradition proceedings against him were taken from the hands of the county court at Barrie and placed under the jurisdiction of A. C. Kingstone, of the Ontario Supreme Court.

Another charge was added to those previously made against the former Chicagoan. The new charge is theft by bailee—that is, theft by a person of property which he holds for another. Insull was free tonight in $55,000 bail.

RESTRICTION OF DRY WORK PASSES HOUSE

(Associated Press.)

Rigid restrictions on future Federal enforcement of the dry laws, which high ranking prohibition officials termed a "severe handicap" were approved yesterday by the House. It adopted a series of amendments to the Department of Justice supply bill, tearing from the hands of the Prohibition Bureau its powerful weapons of purchase of evidence, wire-tapping, and so-called "undercover men."

In addition the House voted, 129 to 118, to reduce to $8,440,000 the Bureau's appropriation for the next fiscal year—10 per cent below the present appropriation. The action is not final and must be approved by the Senate and the President.

The debate evoked sharp words and rapidly rising tempers. Among those who participated were Representatives Britten (Republican), Illinois; Schafer (Republican), Wisconsin; Clancy (Republican), Michigan, speaking in opposition to and Blanton (Democrat), Texas, and Moore (Republican), Ohio, speaking on behalf of prohibition.

The first move by the antiprohibitionists has been a drive to eliminate all prohibition funds from the supply bill, but failing in this, they succeeded in tying onto it the amendments.

Col. Amos W. W. Woodcock, in charge of Federal enforcement, refused to comment, and his subordinates would only speculate on how far-reaching the effect of the "han-

$1,000,000 Insurance Fraud Plot Is Charged

Chicago, Jan. 27 (A.P.).—State's Attorney Thomas J. Courtney late today obtained a warrant charging E. J. Stevens with conspiracy to defraud policyholders of the Illinois Life Insurance Co. of $1,000,000.

The action was taken, Courtney said, shortly after he had been informed that Stevens planned to leave the United States. Stevens was vice president of the company when it went into a receivership recently.

EFFORT TO TRIM SUPPLY BILL TO BE MADE TODAY

Senate to Seek to Cut Treasury-Postoffice Measure.

TYDINGS WITHDRAWS HIS DRASTIC MOTIONS

Economy Rider, Including New U. S. Pay Reduction, Is Nearing Vote.

By ROBERT C. ALBRIGHT.

Discarding the drastic Tydings proposal to slash $492,000,000 from all the supply bills, the Senate today will attempt to trim from $35,000,000 to $50,000,000 off the Treasury-Postoffice measure as the first step in carrying out a modified economy program agreed to by Senate Democrats.

The Tydings motion was withdrawn yesterday at the Maryland senator's own request, without a record vote, but not before Republicans registered opposition by refusing unanimous consent. Senator Tydings decided to accept the substitute program at a party conference earlier in the day.

Senator Robinson, of Arkansas, Democratic leader, who announced the conference agreement, did not say where the cuts would be made. First intimation was given by Senator McKellar (Democrat), Tennessee, who shortly afterward offered an amendment to reduce the public buildings appropriation in the Treasury-Postoffice bill from $50,000,000 to $25,000,000.

Vote Is Imminent.

Indications are that the economy rider, including the proposed 1 2-3 per cent additional Federal pay cut, will go to a vote this afternoon. Senator Bingham (Republican), Connecticut, chairman of the Senate Economy Committee, will take the floor to explain it.

The substitute for the Tydings resolution, drawn up yesterday at the Democratic conference, proposes that expenditures be held down to estimated revenues "at the earliest practicable time." The Tydings motion would have required the cuts to be made at this session.

Senator Robinson announced no effort would be made to send the $961,441,597 back to committee for further slashes, but reductions ranging upward to $50,000,000 would be proposed by the amendments offered from the floor.

Carries Over Objection.

When Senator Tydings asked to withdraw his first motion, Senator Kean (Republican), New Jersey, objected. Vice President Curtis ruled the New Jersey senator was within his rights in objecting. Then Senator Robinson moved that Tydings be

Hoover Likely Will Address Club on National Questions

Bid to Speak at New York Republican Lincoln Day Program Stirs Wide Speculation as to Topics and Future of Party.

(Associated Press.)

Having in mind a number of national questions he desires to discuss publicly, President Hoover last night was inclined to accept an invitation from the National Republican Club to deliver a Lincoln Day address in New York City on Monday, February 13.

Indication was given at the White House that he will go if he can clear his calendar for that date.

The delivery of an address outside the National Capital by a President so short a time before the inauguration of his successor would be an unusual event, attended by international interest.

There was even some conjecture in the Capital last night that Mr. Hoover might make this an occasion for an announcement of his future plans, or of his hopes for the future of the Republican party.

It was considered certain that since the rally would be Republican in nature, the President would take the opportunity, if he accepts, to reaffirm the policies of the party served by Abraham Lincoln.

During the campaign, the Chief Executive delivered an address at Springfield, Ill., where Lincoln's tomb is located. There he compared some of the difficulties besetting the great emancipator with those faced during his own administration.

Mr. Hoover already has canvassed informally a number of subjects he might discuss in such a speech. He feels strongly that something should be said about the influx of goods, despite the tariff, from countries with depreciated currency.

He probably would speak also of the necessity for a balanced budget, and, should congressional action along this line not be taken meanwhile, would advocate a general sales tax as a means of gaining a stable source of income during times of depression.

The President may hesitate to speak of the tangled war-debt situation so close to the time for President-elect Roosevelt's conferences with Great Britain and other debtors, but he feels that this subject is interwoven with that of depreciated moneys abroad.

Bookkeeper in New Jersey Elopes With Niece of C. M. Schwab.

Morristown, N. J., Jan. 27 (A.P.).—The elopement of Miss Mary Jane Schwab, niece of Charles M. Schwab, the steel manufacturer, and Arthur Leonard Knowlton, jr., who has been working temporarily as a bookkeeper for a local expressman, was revealed today and later confirmed by the bridegroom's family.

The marriage took place late yesterday in Easton, Pa., records in the Northampton County showed today. The couple applied for a license and were married by Alderman Thomas P. McNally, of the Seventh Ward.

The news was given to the parents of the couple over the telephone last night.

JAPANESE REPULSE CHINESE PASS DRIVE

Shanhaikwan, China, Jan. 27 (A.P.).—Chiumenkow, a pass through the Great Wall of China, about 12 miles north of Shanhaikwan, was the scene of another conflict between Japanese and Chinese troops today, in which the Japanese emerged victorious.

The Chinese, who had been concentrating for some time at the southern end of the pass, launched an attack on the Japanese detachment at the northern end. The battle lasted for three hours, the Japanese reported, and at its conclusion the attackers retreated to the west, in the direction of Shimenchai. There was no report of casualties.

The assaulting force was believed to be a unit of the command of Gen. Ho Chu-Kuo, the Chinese military leader who was in charge of the garrison at Shanhaikwan when the Japanese occupied this city January 3, after a prolonged battle.

The Rengo (Japanese) News Agency reported that reinforcements were being rushed by the Japanese to Chiumenkow from Suichung, in Manchuria.

The northern end of Chiumenkow was occupied by the Japanese shortly after the battle of Shanhaikwan. They left a small garrison there, the main column rushing northward to Chinai, in Jehol Province. Mopping-up operations against groups of Chinese were carried on by this column.

Counterfeit Plot Denied by Dechow

"Count Von Buelow," Also in $200,000 Scheme, Balks Extradition.

Chicago, Jan. 27 (A.P.).—Henry Dechow pleaded not guilty today to charges in connection with what the Government has alleged was a plot to release $200,000 of counterfeit currency in the United States.

Trial was set for February 8. Federal prosecutors said they wished to remove Dr. Valentine Burton here from New York for trial with Dechow. Dr. Burton has opposed extradition from New York.

Dechow, who once was married to a prominent Chicago woman under the name of Count Enrique von Buelow, was charged with passing and possessing 900 counterfeit $100 bills. The Government charged he brought the counterfeit paper by plane to New York.

Former Gov. Alfred E. Smith of New York arrived in Washington at 8:30 last night on the Congressional Limited on an unannounced and mysterious visit to the Capital.

Registering at the Willard, the former New York executive gave instructions that he was not to be disturbed until 9 o'clock this morning. Not even long distance telephone calls were to be accepted for him, he said.

Alabaman Is Jailed As Slayer of Bride

Ax Head Found in Ashes of Fireplace Said to Be Weapon Used.

Dadeville, Ala., Jan. 27 (A.P.).—A farmer today was held in jail charged with the slaying of his bride of three weeks, while officers sought an unnamed man as an accomplice.

Ira B. Marable, 37-year-old farmer, was arrested late last night by Sheriff J. Kyle Young less than twelve hours after neighbors had found the body of Mrs. Marable in their rural home.

Mrs. Marable had been slain with an ax. The head of an ax, the one officers said was used in the slaying, was found in the ashes in the fireplace of the room last night.

CAPITAL RELIEF BILL RUNS INTO SNAG IN SENATE

HOUSE HAD REPASSED DEFICIENCY MEASURE

Senator Hale Makes Futile Appeal for Action to Forestall Distress.

After precipitous House action to get urgently needed local relief appropriations through Congress and before the President before the close of the week, the revised first deficiency bill providing the funds met a new obstacle in the Senate late yesterday.

The rocky road to local relief seemed near an end, when Senator Hiram Bingham (Republican), Connecticut, unexpectedly moved to reinsert $28,000,000 in tax refunds, taken out of the bill by the House earlier in the day to insure speedy enactment of local aid items.

When the Bingham motion was agreed to by a viva voce vote, Senator Kenneth McKellar (Democrat), demanded a record vote, and the whole question went over until noon today.

Senator Hale's Appeal.

The Connecticut senator's move was in the face of an earnest appeal by Senator Frederick Hale (Republican), Maine, chairman of the Senate appropriations committee. Portraying the local emergency, Senator Hale said the Emergency Relief Bureau has a $23,000 pay roll to meet today, from which 2,500 needy persons will benefit. He pointed out the bureau is $45,000 in debt.

By a strange coincidence, it was Senator Bingham who upbraided Senator Huey Long last week for interfering by filibuster with passage of the first deficiency bill, providing $825,000 for local relief.

Before offering his motion on the floor yesterday Senator Bingham made the same proposal in the appropriations committee and was voted down. He argued the Government should pay its just debts, and the refunds should be made under the first deficiency bill.

Byrns States Position.

House Appropriations Chairman Joseph W. Byrns, in persuading his committee to take the $28,000,000 out of the bill, had announced it would be taken care of probably in the second deficiency bill. It was with this understanding that the House yesterday passed the bill and hurried it to the Senate.

Informed of the latest snag encountered, Representative Byrns expressed regret.

"I intended to take care of the tax refunds in another bill in two or

FORD CHARGES FOES PLOT TO BAR NEW CAR

HENRY FORD.

Says Rivals Have Bank Backing in Control Step.

GIVES NOTICE HE WILL FIGHT

Body Firm's Workers Back by Monday, Officials Feel.

London, Jan. 27 (A.P.).—A sensational statement that the present strike in an automobile body plant which has tied up his Detroit factory was caused by competitors who want to keep his new car off the market was made by Henry Ford in a transatlantic telephone interview today with the Evening Standard.

"The actual truth is that certain bankers are trying to obtain control of the Ford concern," the Standard quoted Mr. Ford.

"Certain of my competitors are operating against me supported by these bankers with the object of preventing another Ford car from leaving the factory. I know this and I know what to do about it. They have succeeded for a few hours, but I am going straight out now and clean up this whole affair.

Says He Will Fight.

"I'll fight them and prove that production of Ford cars can't be stopped. It will cost a great deal of money but I can't help that. We are going out after our opponents at once before the strike spreads.

"It was the biggest surprise of my career when I was informed last night that 6,000 employes of the Briggs Co. had walked out without giving any particular reason. I have had difficulties in my early career but this was the biggest jolt of all. The result of their action is that the Ford plant is closed down. There is a complete holdup.

"Cars are waiting for bodies to be assembled upon them. At present 40,000 of my own workmen can not, even if they wished, do a stroke of work.

Confidence in Employes.

"I don't blame the employes of Briggs. They want to work. Neither do I think an attempt is being made by any one to force me to place my motor car body contract with any other firm.

"As for my own employes, there is not a man among them that would strike. I have complete confidence in every man and boy. The fact they are not working does not mean they are on strike.

"Meanwhile, the situation here is peaceful. The report that police are guarding the Ford factories is untrue and I wish you would deny it in England."

150,000 Out of Work.

Detroit, Mich., Jan. 27 (U.P.).—The Nation-wide Ford automobile manufacturing system shut down today as result of wage strikes in the two Detroit factories which produce Ford bodies.

The shutdown threw 150,000 men out of work and caused losses estimated at $1,000,000 a day.

Within a few hours the Briggs Co., where the largest strike occurred, announced it would grant striking workers a fixed pay rate amounting to an increase. Officials predicted the strike would end by Monday.

The Ford shutdown came about because of wage troubles in the Briggs Co. and the Murray Body Corporation of America.

ROOSEVELT'S STAFF BUSY ON REGROUPING

Warm Springs, Ga., Jan. 27 (A.P.).—President-elect Roosevelt today put to work a staff of friends for the formulation of the sweeping Government reorganization program he wants ready by March 4.

The veteran Swager Sherley, of Kentucky, former chairman of the House Appropriations Committee, departed for Washington to head the clearing house for information to be gathered together.

Telling Sherley "we want all the economy we can get," Mr. Roosevelt outlined a three-point plan: First, reduction of personnel; second, consolidation of Government agencies; third, abandonment of unnecessary and overlapping Government functions.

The recent reorganization scheme submitted to Congress by President Hoover appears to be out. Whatever is liked, of course will be kept, but Roosevelt and Sherley have their own ideas and are now after all the data to be obtained in drafting things into a concrete program.

Setting March 4—inauguration day—for the date when he wants to have the reorganization setup all prepared, it appears the President-elect is going to include this in the agenda for the special session of the new Congress which probably will be called in April.

Hoping to avoid as much as possible increased unemployment through the new arrangement, Mr. Roosevelt indicated he would favor either the furlough plan or a stagger system or both to make up for the reduction in personnel.

Standing temporarily on the broad policies he outlined, he is not going into details until all information is available, but he is hopeful of a drastic cut in Government expenditures that will lead also to increased efficiency.

As for the elimination of some Government functions, Mr. Roosevelt feels there is considerable overlapping now in the duties and activities of the various departments.

Asked about elimination of some of the navy yards he said that would have to be worked out, but he proposed that if the yards could be made useful in peace times they should be kept as absolute necessities in national defense.

New York, Jan. 27 (A.P.).—The eviction of tenants in seven apartments in "Paradise Alley," a writers' and artists' colony, precipitated a riot today during which one man was injured so severely he was taken unconscious to a hospital, where surgeons said he probably had a fractured skull.

Pistols were drawn, fights started and heads were thumped even before the riot broke out.

FARRELL INDORSES INCREASED TARIFFS

(Associated Press.)

Republican administration strategy to use the powerful lever of higher tariffs to force world exchange stabilization received a hefty boost yesterday from James A. Farrell, one-time head of United States Steel.

He labeled legislation to increase duties against foreign countries with depreciated currencies "the most important thing before Congress" and said it would put the United States in a "much improved" position during war debts negotiations.

Farrell testified before a House ways and means subcommittee as chairman of the foreign commerce committee of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States. He favored no specific bill, but indorsed the principles of higher rates to compensate for cheapened currency.

This proposition already has received the unanimous indorsement of the House Republican conference and, claiming full support from President Hoover, administration leaders quietly were planning to force a House vote through the drastic discharge petition. Many of the necessary 145 representatives already had signed to secure the ballot. The Democrats continued to ignore the project. They desire the tariff question kept open for the new administration.

His Labor Allies in Dail Also Win 7 Seats; Cosgrave Captures 42.

Dublin, Irish Free State, Jan. 27 (A.P.).—Returns from Tuesday's general elections late tonight finally gave President Eamon de Valera and his Labor allies a full majority in the new Dail Eireann.

The president's Fianna Fail party had 70 seats in the new Legislature and Labor had 7. There are 152 seats in the Dail, plus the speaker, who votes in ties. There are 16 seats to come, and if Mr. de Valera can gain six or seven from them, as seems likely, his party will have a clear majority over everybody, including his allies.

The party standing: Fianna Fail, 70; Cumann na nGaedheal (the party of former President William T. Cosgrave), 42; Independents, 9; Center party, 9; Labor, 7.

In addition, fortified by the tremendous increase in popular vote, Mr. De Valera, his friends believe, will consider that he has received an emphatic mandate to proceed on the way dear to his heart—the development of Ireland as an independent unit among the nations of the world, and further severance of the bonds that bind the Free State to the Anglo-Saxon island across the Irish Sea.

With 29 of 153 contests for Dail Eireann seats undecided, the Fianna Fail party tonight had a lead of six over all other parties combined.

The tremendousness of the De Valera victory is better illustrated by the poular vote than by the figures on seats in the new Dail. In 24 constituencies, the number of first preference votes cast for the Fianna Fail was 528,000, against 422,000 last year. The Cumann Na Ngaedheal, the party of former President William T. Cosgrave, polled 334,000 in those constituencies, against 357,000 last year

HALF BILLION RELIEF BILL IS GIVEN SENATE

(Associated Press.)

Accompanied by a flat declaration that existing unemployment relief "is so meager that it is a national disgrace," the new $500,000,000 relief bill drafted by the Manufactures Committee was formally reported yesterday to the Senate.

Chairman La Follette (Republican), Wisconsin, in sending the bill and report to the desk of Vice President Curtis, announced he would seek to get the bill up for consideration at the first opportunity.

Combining, with several changes, the old La Follette-Costigan $500,000,000 relief measure and the bill of Senator Cutting (Republican), New Mexico, for $15,000,000 to aid transients, the bill is believed by its sponsors to be in line with the views of President-elect Roosevelt.

La Follette and Cutting talked the relief situation over with the incoming Chief Executive at Warm Springs over the week-end, conferred with Costigan immediately on their return, and La Follette called the committee together to draw up a program.

The bill provides for direct Federal grants to the States, with the Reconstruction Corporation to act as fiscal agent. The half-billion would be raised by empowering the corporation to increase its security issues. Administration would be under a board of three.

La Follette Bill Carries $780,572 District Aid

The District would be allotted $780,572 out of $200,000,000 to be distributed among the various States and Territories for relief purposes, on a population basis, under the La Follette bill, according to a report filed yesterday by the Senate Manufactures Committee.

The bill would appropriate a total of $500,000,000 for relief, 40 per cent of which would be distributed according to population of States and Territories in need. The remaining $300,000,000 would be allotted sectionally, "to the extent that local needs are not covered by local and State funds and the funds available upon the population basis."

12 GOVERNORS PLAN TRIP TO INAUGURAL

Seven Report Their Inability to Attend and Three Remain in Doubt.

Governors of twelve States have already signified their intention of attending the Roosevelt inaugural ceremonies, according to announcement yesterday by Ray Baker, chairman of the committee on distinguished guests. Three other chief executives who have replied are still in doubt. Seven governors have informed Mr. Baker that they will be unable to attend.

The governors who will be here are Gov. Wilbur L. Cross of Connecticut; Gov. C. Douglas Buck of Delaware; Gov. David Sholtz of Florida; Gov. Eugene Talmadge of Georgia; Gov. Paul V. McNutt of Indiana; Gov. Louis J. Brann of Maine; Gov. Albert Cabell Ritchie of Maryland; Gov. William A. Comstock of Michigan; Gov. Arthur Harry Moore of New Jersey; Gov. Gifford Pinchot of Pennsylvania; Gov. Theodore Francis Green of Rhode Island; Gov. Ibra Charles Laskwood of South Carolina.

The governors who have declined are Gov. C. Ben Ross, of Idaho; Gov. Alfred M. Landon of Kansas; Gov. Fred B. Balzar, of Nevada; Gov. John G. Winant, of New Hampshire; Gov. William Langer, of North Dakota; Gov. Henry H. Blood, of Utah, and Gov. William Gustavus Conley, of West Virginia.

As soon as the committee on distinguished guests has more complete information on the total of visiting dignitaries, aids, both civil and military, will be appointed by each governor, and negotiations will be begun then with the various State societies and other social organizations, for such special entertainment as may be provided for the visitors during their stay in Washington.

All of the governors with their staffs are, of course, expected to attend the governors' reception, which is to be held on the night of March 3 at the Pan-American Union, and the inaugural ball, which will take place on the night of March 4 at the Washington Auditorium.

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt and other members of her family who are expected to attend the ball are to be seated in specially constructed boxes projecting from either side of the stage, according to announcement by Mrs. John Allan Dougherty, chairman of the inaugural ball committee. Although the exact make-up of the presidential party has not been determined, it is anticipated that Mr. and Mrs. Curtis B. Dall and Mr. and Mrs. James Roosevelt will accompany their mother to the social climax of the inaugural festivities. Mrs. Dougherty also hopes that Mr. and Mrs. James A. Farley will attend the ball as guests of honor. Vice President John N. Garner and Mrs. Garner also will, of course, be among the guests of honor.

All of School's Cadets Seek Inaugural Place

The committee on education of the Federation of Civic Associations last night, at a meeting of the federation in the board room at the District Building, was directed to take up with the committee on the inauguration the practicability of having the entire high school cadet organization in the parade, rather than the curtailed force which represented that body four years ago.

The matter of organization of rookie squads and companies in the cadet organization also was referred to the committee for investigation, as well as the matter of intercollegiate boxing in school auditoriums.

The federation was ordered to meet with the Central Northwest Civic Association February 16, at the Garnet Patterson Junior High School, for a celebration appropriate to Negro History Week.

5 Remain to Vote On "Lame Ducks"

(Associated Press.)

Only five States so far have failed to ratify the twentieth "lame duck" amendment to the Constitution, but all still have a chance to act this spring.

Two are New England States—New Hampshire and Vermont. Maryland's Legislature has yet to act and so has Florida's. In Nevada the amendment is halfway through but has been laid aside since ratification was completed last Monday. The Legislatures in four of the States have been in session since early this month, but Florida's meets in April.

Hartford, Conn., Jan. 27 (A.P.).—Connecticut today ratified the "lame duck" amendment to the Federal Constitution. The Senate by a vote of 29 to 1 concurred with the House which yesterday voted 260 to nothing in favor.

Walsh Would Have Senate Practice Economy on Itself

Bay Stater Finds Lesson in $4,000,000 Bill for Odds and Ends for Comfort of Legislators; Members Remain Quite Unmoved.

(Associated Press.)

Adherence to the old policy of "practicing what you preach," in the way of economy, was demanded of the Senate yesterday by Senator Walsh (Democrat), of Massachusetts, in an informal statement pledging his efforts toward closing the chamber's purse to odds and ends for the comfort and enjoyment of the legislators.

Walsh's comment, made off the floor, pertained to the report of Edwin P. Thayer, Senate secretary, showing expenditures aggregating $4,000,000 in just over a year, in which were such items as mineral water, barber shop supplies, aspirin tablets and hair tonic.

While the acrimonious debate over ways of cutting Federal costs a half billion or so raged on the Senate floor, this report from Thayer lay on virtually every senator's desk, showing that the mineral water bill, with ice, was about $9,000; while some $8,000 went for the barbershop where members get free shaves, haircuts and singes—but no manicures.

Most senators merely chuckled at this—their attitude, expressed privately, being that after all, there are senatorial prerogatives. One said the barber shop had been there 50 or 75 years, and it was a distinct help to the country by saving a senator's time.

Another—Lewis, Illinois Democrat, and the only man with a beard in the Senate—took occasion because of published reports about the barber shop, to go officially on record in a formal statement that he had never been in the shop in his life.

LENORE ULRIC.

BELASCO TREASURES FARE BADLY IN SALE

Not a Dime Is Offered for Lenore Ulric in Oils But Cuspidors Bring $1.

New York, Jan. 27 (A.P.).—No one would give even a dime today for an original oil portrait of Lenore Ulric, once David Belasco's leading lady, and so an auctioneer pounded his hammer and the sale of the late producer's 4,000 treasures went on.

Yet a few moments later a sentimental, gray-haired woman bid $1 for a pair of rose-colored glass cuspidors and went away with them, one under each arm.

The auction was full of such paradoxes.

There was incongruity even in the crowds that swarmed through an East Side auction house. Stage folk in quest of some cheap little Belasco memento mingled with brusque second-hand dealers looking for bargains. And then there were curious folk who paraded around as if in a museum and never bid.

The vast building indeed was a museum, for the producer had spent nearly half a century amassing this collection from all part of the world.

Morris Gest, his son-in-law, stood far off in a corner and explained how collecting had been the producer's hobby; how Mrs. Gest, since her father's death in 1930, had had to pay thousands of dollars to store the 4,000 pieces.

A portrait of an unidentified bewhiskered gentleman had just sold for $1.50 when the painting of Miss Ulric was displayed. It was she who had been raised to stardom in 1917 by Belasco, and he had given her the lead in play after play.

Since the portrait had been taken from his studio wall it had grown heavy with dust. Some one wiped the face.

"Who'll give $1? Fifty cents, any one? How about 10? All right. We'll have to send Miss Ulric out into the cold."

Air Line Inspector Is Killed in Crash

M. S. Boggs Was in Service of Commerce Department for Five Years.

(Associated Press.)

M. S. Boggs, air line inspector of the Commerce Department, was killed Thursday night in a crash at Corona, Calif. He had been in the department service for five years and was rated an experienced airman.

Boggs frequently had been transferred to radio research work and had expected to be assigned to the latter permanently. In 1929 Boggs was flying a huge passenger airplane on Long Island in a test flight when it crashed, demolishing the machine.

He began his flying at the University of California at the outbreak of the World War. He was 39 years old, a native of Tucson, Ariz.

SENATE WILL SEEK SUPPLY BILL SLASH

granted the necessary permission. His motion carried.

Meanwhile, there was considerable debate at the Democrats' expense.

"We've marched up the hill, and now we are marching down again," Senator Smoot (Republican), Utah, observed.

Appropriations Chairman Hale wanted assurance that reductions in necessary items would not be attempted from the floor.

Robinson would make no promises.

"We will not pledge ourselves to vote appropriations in this bill, some of which involve scandal," he said.

Tydings said withdrawal of his motion was personally embarrassing to him, but declared colleagues convinced him the cuts could not be accomplished at once without amending a number of the laws now on the statute books, including the emergencyy officers act.

The substitute Democratic resolution, which many believe ends all hope of balancing the budget at this session, probably will be introduced next week.

Outlining its provisions, Senator Robinson said:

"The Appropriations Committee in future bills is expected to respond to the principles of the resolution, but it is not expected that all possible reductions will be accomplished by the action of the committee, nor is it contemplated that the final goal of restoring a satisfactory proportion between revenues and appropriations will be reached until material changes in authorization shall be made by legislation."

Democrats aspire to achieving major economies through reorganization powers proposed for the incoming President. Senator Bratton (Democrat), New Mexico, who already has pending a resolution to abolish the Department of Commerce and distribute its functions, yesterday introduced a bill to consolidate the Departments of Agriculture and Interior. He said this would save $100,000,000.

A. F. L. AVERS SMALL GROUP FORCED CUTS

(Associated Press.)

Domination of the Nation's industrial system, to the detriment of labor, was attributed to a small group of New York's private bankers yesterday by a spokesman for the American Federation of Labor, testifying before a Senate judiciary subcommittee.

John P. Frey, secretary-treasurer of the federation's metal trades department, traced a maze of interlocking directorates from J. P. Morgan & Co. and other private banking institutions, through the commercial banks down to the roots of American industry.

Through this, he said, the private bankers have a "strangle-hold" on working conditions.

Testifying on the Black 30-hour week bill, Frey said this set-up not only empowered the bankers to dictate wage policies but to scatter the earnings of utility companies through a chain of holding companies.

Points to 855 Directorates.

Taking the Chase National Bank as an example, he said partners in seven private banking houses were represented on its directorate. The directors of the Chase Bank, he added, hold 855 directorates in other banks and corporations, including 69 in other commercial banks; 262 in miscellaneous corporations; 82 in fifty-five insurance companies; 236 in manufacturing corporations; 133 in transportation companies and 73 in public utilities.

Frey listed the seven private banking houses represented in the Chase directorate as Dillon-Read & Co.; Goldman-Sachs Co., Kuhn-Loeb & Co., Lee Higginson & Co., J. Henry Schroder Banking Corporation, J. & W. Seligman & Co., and White, Weld & Co.

One man on the Chase board, he said, was a director of 125 companies, adding:

"I don't see how he finds time even to attend the meetings."

Frey testified that 310 directors of eight big New York Commercial banks hold directorships in 3,741 other banks, insurance companies, utilities and other corporations. He said these eight banks were:

The Bank of America National Association, Bank of Manhattan Trust Co., Bankers Trust Co., Chase National Bank, Chemical Bank & Trust Co., Guaranty Trust Co., National City Bank and the New York Trust Co.

Asserting that "private banks dominate or are in a position to dominate the public banks," Frey named 13 private banking houses whose partners hold 73 directorships in commercial banks.

Resignation of Farrell.

To support his story, Frey testified that James J. Farrell resigned as president of the United States Steel Co. shortly after making a public statement advocating maintenance of wage levels, and that immediately after his withdrawal the company reduced its wages.

He said J. P. Morgan was chairman of the Steel board and his banking house was "deeply interested" in it. Two other Morgan partners also were directors, he added.

Albert H. Wiggin, former chairman of the Chase Bank, Frey said, "was the first banker to demand that wages be reduced," and his influence spread to others.

A large publishing house was forced to abandon its editorial policy in favor of maintenance of wages, he said, by a threat from Wiggin that it would lose its advertising if it refused.

Foundry Co., was again at the side of the President-elect today, discussing "economics." He has been active in studying the railroad situation.

A fresh volume of Cabinet speculation today, particularly from Washington, brought a smiling denial that any Cabinet posts have been formally offered to any one. It was made clear that Mr. Roosevelt is not worrying about this phase of his pre-Presidency and would make his selections and announcements in his own time.

It also was made rather emphatic that no Cabinet choices would be announced before he sails for a fishing cruise next week, although there is every sign that the Cabinet line-up is beginning to take more or less definite shape.

The names of Senator Glass, of Virginia, for Secretary of the Treasury; Owen D. Young, for Secretary of State; Senator Walsh, of Montana, for Attorney General; Senator Cutting, of New Mexico, for Secretary of the Interior, and James A. Farley, of New York, for Postmaster General, remain very definitely in the picture and the speculation.

Mr. Roosevelt will be joined here tomorrow by Mrs. Roosevelt and their son Elliott. Louis M. Howe, political secretary, also is expected.

TWO SONS OF TORCH VICTIM CLAIM BODY

Father Is Sought in Brutal Slaying of Woman in New York.

New City, N. Y., Jan. 27 (A.P.).—From bits of jewelry and clothing, two sons of Mrs. Lena Canora, Lodi, N. J., housewife, identified today the body of a torch-victim discovered yesterday on a snow-covered field as that of their mother.

New York and New Jersey police were asked to hunt the woman's husband, Frank Canora, proprietor of a gas station, after the sons had told of fights between their parents.

Sheriff Thomas L. Farley quoted the sons as saying their mother was to have seen a lawyer yesterday about beginning a divorce action.

It was not many hours after they last saw her that the charred body was found by a passerby, face down, within sight of Spook Rock, a huge stone with an Indian legend.

Wisps of smoke curling upward in the peach and apple country had attracted the attention of Alonzo Osborn as he walked along the road.

The sheriff quoted the sons as saying that their father had beaten their mother recently; that she had him locked over night in jail at Hackensack not long ago, and that he had been living alone in his gas station of late.

They said their mother gave them $1 to buy some paint yesterday morning and that when they returned, she had gone. The last they saw of their father, they explained, was when he came home last night, spent the night at the house, and then left this morning, saying he was going for a walk.

House Allows $2,500 To Still-Fire Victim

(Associated Press.)

The House worked for two and a half hours last night to pass 30 private bills—measures that let John James' name be put on a pension roll or give $30 to Mary Thomas because a mail truck broke her leg in 1927.

The only thing anywhere near startling that it did was pass the Horr bill to pay $2,500 to Gottlieb Stock because his house near Vaughn, Wash., burned down after prohibition agents set fire to a still nearby.

Agriculture-Interior Merger Sought in Bill

(Associated Press.)

Consolidation of the Departments of Agriculture and Interior into a Department of National Development was called for yesterday in a bill by Senator Bration (Democrat), N. Mex. Bratton said he believed the step would save at least $50,000,000 yearly.

Under its terms, all the powers and duties of the two departments and their officials would be vested in a secretary of national development.

POWER RATE SLASH ACCORD GROWS DIM

Formal Negotiations Not to Be Resumed Until Next Week.

Further postponement in the prolonged negotiations between the Public Utilities Commission and the Potomac Electric Power Co. relative to the termination of litigation preparatory to reducing electric rates was announced yesterday, and chances that an agreement would be reached began to dim.

S. R. Bowen, counsel for the power company, yesterday caused the new delay after Maj. Gen. Mason M. Patrick, chairman of the commission, had predicted Thursday afternoon that a settlement might be agreed upon yesterday. Mr. Bowen said he was unable to get in touch with his colleagues who must approve any action taken by him.

Although the commission said the only purpose of Mr. Bowen's visit yesterday afternoon was to convey this message, the power company's attorney remained in conference with the utilities body and William A. Roberts, special assistant counsel, for considerable time.

Corporation Counsel William W. Bride and People's Counsel Richmond B. Keech, who have been in accord from the first in their insistence upon the retention of the commission's right to fix rates independently, were called in for a brief parley and then dismissed. The commission, Mr. Roberts and Mr. Bowen continued their conference for some time thereafter.

Vice Chairman Riley E. Elgen said formal negotiations would not be resumed until early next week. Earlier in the day the commission stated that negotiations had been indefinitely postponed because of Mr. Bowen's inability to see other officials of the power company.

MAN ADMITS KILLING GIRL, 6, POLICE SAY

Former Convict Linked With Other Attacks; Pencil Leads to Arrest.

New York, Jan. 27 (A.P.).—A young Negro former convict was held today for the slaying of 6-year-old Helen Sterler after police said he made a complete confession and showed them how and where he strangled the child.

Lloyd Price, 22, was arrested last night on the hunch of a detective who recalled that he had served two prison terms for unnatural crimes.

Early this morning police said he confessed and he later was reported to have gone to the Brooklyn basement where the child's body was found Wednesday night and to have reenacted the crime.

A few hours later he was arraigned on a charge of murder and was held without bail for examination a week from today. He stood mute during arraignment so a plea of "not guilty" was entered for him.

Police quoted him as saying "I forgot about that kid as soon as I left the cellar." They said he admitted he "might have" had something to do with five other attacks on little girls in the same neighborhood in the last two years, but that he told them he "couldn't remember things very long" and did not know for sure whether he had killed any other children.

According to the account given by police, Price struck up a conversation with the Sterler girl Wednesday afternoon, gave her a new, shiny quarter, showed her a bright-colored pencil and then, while she was looking at the pencil, led her into a hallway.

Then, placing his hand over her mouth to "stop her from hollering," he carried her into the basement, attacked her, strangled her with a clothesline and finally struck her a few times to make sure she was dead.

It was the pencil which led to Price's arrest. He dropped it in the basement. When confronted by police he denied it was his, but his mother told the officers it had belonged to her husband.

Accountant Is Acquitted In Kreuger & Toll Case

Stockholm, Jan. 27 (A.P.).—Herr Hennig, chief accountant of Kreuger & Toll Co., who was arrested last May on charges in connection with irregularities of the company's accounts, was acquitted today.

The court held that Ivar Kreuger, head of the company, who committed suicide in Paris, was responsible for certain manipulations and that Hennig had no suspicion of what was being done.

Coveted French Gold Prize Is Given to Capital Woman

Mme. Kennedy Is Honored at Ceremonies in New Orleans.

Before a large and distinguished audience at the Little Theater, in New Orleans, Mme. Aline de l'Isle Kennedy, wife of W. A. Kennedy, financial editor of The Washington Post, last night received the annual award of the Athenee Louisianais, the highest literary honor bestowed by France in this country.

The award, a gold medal, is presented to the author of the best historical essay written in the French language. The subject of Mme. Kennedy's winning essay was "The First American Administration of Louisiana under Gov. Claiborne, from 1803 to 1816."

The essay selected for the award must conform with the highest literary standards in the French language. Frequently no awards are made for three or four years at a time because the contestants do not meet the desired standards.

The Athenee Louisanais is affiliated with the French Academy and is a group of the French Aliance. One of the oldest, if not the oldest French societies in the United States, it has offered the annual essay prize for more than 50 years on the authority of the French Academy.

The occasion of the presentation of the award last night was the annual literary and artistic meeting of the society. The ceremony included a reading of Mme. Kennedy's essay.

Mme. Kennedy is a native of New Orleans. She is a graduate of Tulane University and is the author of a number of successful French plays. She is descended on her father's side from the family of Rouget de l'Isle, author of the "Marseillaise," the French national anthem. On her mother's side, she is descended from family of Josephine, wife of the Emperor Napoleon. Mme. Kennedy makes her home with her husband at 1451 Park road northwest.

SECOND CLARK TRIAL JURY IS DISMISSED

Deliberates for 19 Hours in Rockville and Reports It Can Not Agree.

Unable to agree, the jury which heard the second trial of Berry E. Clark, former clerk to the Montgomery County Commissioners, on charges of embezzling $426 of county funds, was dismissed yesterday in Montgomery County Circuit Court at Rockville, Md.

The jury had deliberated for nearly nineteen hours when it was dismissed at 3:45 p. m. This was three-quarters of an hour longer than the jury at the first trial which resulted in a deadlock of eleven for acquittal and one for conviction. The jury yesterday stood nine for conviction and three for acquittal, when it was dismissed by Chief Judge Hammond Urner and Associate Judge Arthur D. Willard. It had been given the case at 9 p. m. Thursday.

The jury was called into the courtroom while some 500 spectators looked on. After it had filed into the jury box, Judge Urner asked if there was any possibility that an agreement might be reached. The foreman, Clayton Ricketts, replied that there was no possibility of an agreement.

Juror Is Injured.

Judge Urner said he was sorry that they had been unable to reach a decision, but that he appreciated their efforts, and ordered the panel dismissed.

He said that he also was sorry to hear that one of the jurors had been injured. Walter Buxton, who had gone to sleep while sitting on a chair tilted against the wall, was cut on the back of the head when the chair slipped and he fell to the floor. The chair was demolished.

The three jurors who held out for acquittal were Stauzey King, of Redland; Albert M. Dorsey, of Gaithersburg, and Walter Davis, of Rockville. All three were talesmen who were picked up on the street by the sheriff, Richard H. Lansdale, and his assistants, when the original panel had been exhausted.

Released on Bond.

There was no demonstration at the close of the trial such as there was at the end of the first trial, when the 11 jurors who had voted for acquittal crowded about Clark and shook hands with him. After the jury had been dismissed, Clark was released on bond of $5,000 to await further action in the case.

State's Attorney Stedman Prescott said he had no plans to announce at present. Court attaches, however, felt that he probably would renew his petition for removal to another county if another trial is ordered, which is believed probable.

The trial of Clark began Monday and brought more than 100 witnesses to testify. It was estimated that it has cost the county nearly $5,000.

Boy Is Gone

LEE MORSE.

New York, Jan. 27 (A.P.).—The 16-year-old son of Lee Morse, blues singer, has been missing since January 8 and police all over the country have been asked to look for him.

This was disclosed today by the singer and her accompanist-husband, Robert Downey.

The boy, Jack, disappeared while en route from Savannah, Ga., to Troy, N. Y. His mother and stepfather last saw him as he boarded a train at Savannah to return to the Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute at Troy after the Christmas holidays.

His parents believe they have traced him as far as New York. A pullman porter said a youth answering Jack's description reached this city safely on January 8, "minded his business all the way up and didn't talk to anybody." He was to have gone directly from the Pennsylvania Railroad station to the Grand Central terminal to board a train for Troy.

Downey said they first learned of the boy's absence from school last Monday when classmates wrote that he had not returned from his vacation.

"He's either suffering from amnesia or is being detained somewhere against his will," Downey said.

The Missing Persons Bureau of the New York Police Department sent out a general alarm for the boy. He is 6 feet 1 inch tall, weighs about 140 pounds and wears shell-rimmed glasses. When last seen he was carrying a drawing board, and wearing a brown overcoat, suit and hat.

COUNTY HEADS BACK GASOLINE TAX BILL

Would Add to Montgomery and Prince Georges Sums; Levy Cuts Possible.

By a Staff Correspondent.

Annapolis, Md., Jan. 27.—A bill proposing to give Montgomery and Prince Georges Counties each $63,000 of the gasoline tax funds in addition to their share of the lateral road money was approved here today by the Association of County Commissioners. Success of the bill in the Legislature would permit lowering the Prince Georges tax rate 9.5 cents and the Montgomery rate 7.5 cents, exclusive of any other economies effected by the Legislature.

The bill would give each county in the State a substantial share of the money which now goes to the State Roads Commission for the State highway system. Under the bill the 1½-cent lateral road tax would be distributed as recommended by Gov. Albert C. Ritchie, and ½-cent of the gasoline tax would continue to be spent for grade crossing elimination. But 1 cent of the 2-cent maintenance tax would be divided between the counties and Baltimore city, the other 1 cent still going to the State Roads Commission.

$2,000,000 Revenue Seen.

Revenues of this 1 cent tax would amount to about $2,000,000, of which 30 per cent, or $600,000 would go to Baltimore city, by the terms of the bill. The remainder would be divided in the following percentage: Allegheny, 5 per cent; Anne Arundel, 6 per cent; Baltimore County, 14 per cent; Calvert, 1 per cent; Caroline, 3 per cent; Carroll, 6.5 per cent; Cecil, 4 per cent; Prince Georges, 4.5 per cent; Queen Anne, 3 per cent; Washington, 6 per cent; Wicomico, 4 per cent; Charles, 2 per cent; Dorchester, 4 per cent; Frederick, 9 per cent; Garrett, 5 per cent; Harford, 4 per cent; Howard, 2.5 per cent; Kent, 2 per cent; Montgomery, 4.5 per cent; St. Marys, 2 per cent; Somerset, 2.5 per cent; Talbot, 2 per cent, and Worcester, 3.5 per cent.

This division would give Frederick County $126,000; Charles County, $28,000, and St. Marys County, $28,000. One per cent of the sum left after Baltimore city's share is deducted amounts to $14,000. The bill also provides not more than 15 per cent of each county's share may be turned back to incorporated towns in its borders at the discretion of the county commissioners.

Chances of passing the bill were somewhat improved yesterday by the clause giving Baltimore City 30 per cent of the 1-cent receipts and a promise to sponsor a bill to give the city 30 per cent of the whole $8,000,000 collected from the gasoline tax. So far the county commissioners, who believe the gasoline tax funds diverted to county roads should be spent by the county rather than by the State Roads Commission, have been going contrary to the wishes of the administration. But with the united support of the Baltimore City delegation and the Republicans in the House, the bill would have 62 out of 118 votes.

Defeat Predicted In Senate.

The bill apparently stands little chance of passage in the Senate, where a majority can not be counted on. However, if all six of the Baltimore City senators joined with the six Republicans and the three insurgents, the bill would have 15 of the 29 votes.

Members of the association are not expecting the Baltimore legislators, whether in the House or Senate, to come over to their side in a body. They do hope that enogh Democrats will desert the administration to make good any failure of Baltimore men to switch.

The bill, which was approved yesterday by representatives of all the 15 counties voting, would widen the breach between the Commissioners' Association and the administration. The divergence first started when Gov. Ritchie suggested that the lateral road funds be spent on county roads, but by the State Roads Commission.

Entrants in Queen Contest Come From Distant Points

Photo From Montana Illustrates Wide Response to Post's $10,500 Effort to Find Most Charming Girls for Chicago Exposition Honors.

One of the photographs received in the last delivery of mail to the office of The Washington Post last evening was that of Miss Edi Massa, of Red Lodge, Mont., which serves to emphasize the fact that The Post draws no restrictions of residence in its $10,500 search for 51 charming girls to officiate at the opening of the Century of Progress International Exposition at Chicago next June.

Photographs have also been sent in from North and South Carolina and West Virginia, and a great number from neighboring Virginia and Maryland. The fact that friends or relatives may submit pictures of their favorite candidate for the title of "queen," and that the population of Washington is so largely composed of natives of all the 48 States of the Union, has a great influence on this situation, but, wherever their homes may be, The Washington Post will pay all expenses of transportation to and from the exposition for the fortunate girls selected.

In addition, these girls will be royally entertained during their two weeks stay in Chicago and will be costumed by leading modistes. In every activity they will be the properly chaperoned guests of The Washington Post, the Chicago Tribune and the Century of Progress Exposition.

The selection of the group will be made from photographs that are at least 6 by 8 inches in size and that have been made within the last twelve months. Pictures should be mailed to the "Queen Contest Editor, The Washington Post," as soon as possible, although the contest will not close until April 15. On the back of each photograph should be pasted the "Transmittal Coupon" that will be found elsewhere in this paper today, or the same information written on another sheet of paper.

Every unmarried girl, excepting professionals, such as stage girls and artists' models, and employes of The Washington Post, is privileged to compete, and there is positively no expense or obligation involved.

Beginning tomorrow and continuing for ten weeks, ten pictures of entrants will be published in each issue of The Post's Sunday Rotogravure Section. To each girl whose photograph is so published The Washington Post will pay $5. These pictures will be selected entirely upon the basis of their suitability for reproduction and will have no effect upon the subsequent judging of all photographs whether or not they have been published.

After their arrival at Chicago, three girls will be chosen from the 51 to receive cash awards of $5,000, $3,000, and $2,000, respectively. In the order of their selection they will also be given the titles of queen and first and second ladies-in-waiting, while the remaining 48 girls will compose the "Court of Honor" that will participate in the colorful ceremonies that will inaugurate the Century of Progress International Exposition.

58-DAY STAY GIVEN WINNIE RUTH JUDD

Hanging Set for April 14 to Permit Hearing on Pardon Plea.

Phoenix, Ariz., Jan. 27 (A.P.).—The date for the hanging of Winnie Ruth Judd, convicted in the trunk double-murder case, was changed today by the Arizona board of pardons and paroles from February 17 to April 14.

This 58-day reprieve was granted so the board might conduct a hearing into the condemned woman's application for a pardon. The three members of the board found their other duties such that they could not find time for the hearing in the three weeks remaining before her execution was set.

The board members are Arthur T. Laprade, attorney general; Herman E. Hendrix, superintendent of public instruction, and Lin B. Orme, sr., chairman. The governor has no power to pardon, commute, parole or reprieve, under Arizona laws, without the approval of this board. In reporting to the governor, after an executive session last night, the board said:

"The board intends to grant a hearing on the application. A considerable amount of evidence will be offered and the hearing will take probably two or three days.

"The judgment of the Supreme Court, sustaining the conviction and penalty was handed down December 12, 1932. Shortly thereafter Mrs. Judd appeared before the grand jury of Maricopa as a witness. Out of the deliberations of the grand jury came the indictment against J. J. Halloran.

"This matter as you know, has just been concluded. The board felt that it should give no consideration to the application theretofore filed until the proceedings on said indictment and the subsequent preliminary hearing have been disposed of.

"The board feels constrained to give serious consideration to the application for commutation. The hearing on the commutation and a thorough search and study of all the evidence that is now in existence will require a minimum of two weeks.

"The board members wish to be in a position of taking the time necessary to give careful and deliberate consideration to this entire matter."

3 SEIZED IN KILLING OF RICH FARMER, 75

Woman Among Suspects in Brutal Murder of Elderly Kingston, N. Y., Man.

Kingston, N. Y., Jan. 27 (A.P.).—Charged with fatally beating Uriah Quick, a 75-year-old farmer, and tossing him into the cellar of his isolated farmhouse to die, two men and a woman were in jail here tonight.

The trio, arrested a few hours after the aged man's body was discovered by neighbors, are Mary K. Fish, Anton Baessler and Marshall Conners.

Mrs. Fish, a former housekeeper for Quick, and Baessler, a restaurant proprietor, were said by police tonight to have made statements regarding the farmer's death. The nature of the statements, however was not revealed. Conners, a former employe in Baessler's restaurant, refused to talk.

It was recalled by Quick's neighbors that the old farmer was accustomed to carry large sums of money. There was only 24 cents in his pockets when his body was found at the foot of the cellar stairs.

The arrests were made after an investigation by Coroner Howard B. Humison had brought out that the three suspects were in the neighborhood last Sunday. This, coupled with the further fact that Quick had not been seen since that time, led the coroner to have the trio questioned.

Apparently Quick's death was due to blows to his body and head, officers said. Evidence of a bitter struggle in the scantily furnished rooms indicated that the aged man attempted to fight off his assailants.

Tar Pot Injuries Kill Maryland Repair Man

(Associated Press.)

The Society of Cincinnati has presented Secretary Hurley of the War Department with the medal struck by the society to commemorate the 150th anniversary of the surrender of Lord Cornwallis at Yorktown October 19, 1781.

The medal was awarded to the Presidents of the United States, France and Poland, the King of the Belgians, Marshal Petain and staff, Gen. Pershing, Gov. Pollard of Virginia, the Ambassador of Poland and a few others.

The presentation to Secretary Hurley was made by Maj. Edgar E. Hume, president of the society.

ARLINGTON BRIDGE ROAD ISSUE ENDED

ARLINGTON COUNTY,
BUREAU OF THE POST.
Tel. Clar. 509. Clarendon, Va.

With an agreement reached between officials of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission, the War Department and Arlington County, the State of Virginia will probably acquire a right of way for the southern approach to Arlington Memorial Bridge at this session of Congress, it was revealed last night by Chairman Harry A. Fellows, of the county board.

During a conference between the officials, Fellows stated, a bill was drafted which overcomes all objections which have been heretofore offered by the War Department, and, since it carries with it no appropriation by the Federal Government, it is expected to receive no opposition when it reaches Congress.

The bill, Fellows points out, provides for a 100-foot right-of-way over government property, that must be crossed in order to reach the southwest corner of the Arlington National Cemetery and a 60-foot right-of-way from that point to Mount Vernon avenue. Virginia has already been given a 100-foot right-of-way from Station 107 in Lyon Park to a point where it reaches the government property.

The passage of this bill would permit Virginia to connect Lee Boulevard with the Old Georgetown Pike, which skirts the eastern boundary of Arlington National Cemetery, and Chairman Fellows says he has been informed that the National Capital Park and Planning Commission would seek an emergency appropriation of approximately $35,000, to widen and improve this road from the southeast corner of the cemetery to the new bridge connection, now nearing completion.

The Arlington County School Board meeting last night in the office of Superintendent Fletcher Kemp spent several hours going over the budget effective July 1, 1933, which will be submitted to the county board at its first meeting in February. The board approved the pay roll for the month of January.

WASHINGTON RELIEF BILL HITS NEW SNAG

three weeks," he commented. "Anyway, our hands are clear."

The House yesterday passed the measure in record time.

Senator Bingham said he had not heard tax refunds were to be provided in another bill. He "doubted there there would be a second deficiency bill."

He said he did not think local relief would suffer; that adequate funds could be borrowed from private sources.

The first deficiency bill was vetoed early this week by the President because it contained a provision for Congressional review of all tax refunds over $20,000. Senator McKellar, author of the provision, offered his proposal in new form yesterday, as an amendment to the Treasury-Post-office bill. The latest proposal requires approval of refunds by the Comptroller General.

In reporting the revamped first deficiency bill yesterday, Chairman Byrns said:

"In view of the urgent necessity of the appropriation for emergency unemployment relief in the District of Columbia and the pressing nature of some of the other items in the bill, the committee deems it advisable to include in the bill at this time only the items which, in its opinion, will not invoke undue delay in its passage. The item of $28,000,000 for tax refunds has been eliminated entirely and its reconsideration postponed."

Diverting from the subject of railroads for a moment, he turned to the Dawes loan of $90,000,000.

The corporation told his investigating committee, Couzens said, that although a loan of $90,000,000 was authorized, only $40,000,000 was actually advanced. The report to the House, he said, showed the entire amount had been advanced and more than $66,000,000 of it was still outstanding.

In his resolution Couzens proposed to suspend all further loans to the railroads until further action by Congress, explaining that he wanted to prevent additional advances pending action on the bankruptcy bill now before the House.

"It is perfectly apparent to me at least," he said, "that the Federal Government can not maintain that debt structure, and unless there is some form of legislation set up for reorganization of the capital structure of many of these railroads, or unless they set up some voluntary system of reorganization and recapitalization, they will have to go through receivership.

"It is perfectly plain that the credit of the taxpayers can not be used indefinitely, and yet we have the house of Morgan and the house of Kuhn, Loeb & Co. coming to the R. F. C. and begging for these loans. They attempt to assure the R. F. C. that the security is quite adequate, and yet they will not themselves make the loans."

Asserting that the Missouri Pacific has applied for a loan of $3,800,000 and wants more later, Couzens said $14,000,000 already had been loaned to this road and much of it "has gone to the relief of Kuhn-Loeb and the Morgan interests."

The corporation has lent an aggregate of from $250,000,000 to $300,000,000 to the roads, Couzens said, predicting a greater rush for loans than ever before between now and July 1.

The bankruptcy act, Couzens said, "may act as a buffer to this situation." Questioned by Senator King (Democrat), Utah, Couzens said he was advised some of the roads were prepared to avail themselves of this legislation.

King said he would support the Couzens resolution, and added it would be wise for Congress to give attention to any legislation to prevent the Government "from owning a lot of bankrupt railroads."

Quick Hanging of Seven Mexican Bandits Is Told

Mexico City, Jan. 27 (A.P.).—Delayed and unconfirmed reports received here today said that seven bandits were summarily executed last Monday after a prolonged pitched battle with state forces near San Luis Potosi.

After a group of bandits had terrorized that region for some time, state police assisted by government troops set in pursuit, and met with stiff resistance before the bandits were routed. Seven were captured. They were hung on trees along the road leading to Leon, the reports said.

INDIANA ROBINSON LOSES PLEA FOR DEBTS VOTE IN SENATE

to get his nation's debt reduced. Thousands of Americans desire reduction of their debts, but let them try to get onto the floor to state their case."

Unintentional Mistake.

Robinson of Arkansas, replied that he personally had invited Sir Ronald into the chamber.

"That was my mistake," he said. "I did not refresh myself on the rules. It was an unintentional disregard of the rules. The subject of international debts was not even mentioned, much less discussed."

Robinson and Senator Reed (Republican), Pennsylvania, Thursday had explained that the ambassador had brought an acquaintance of theirs, the Marquis of Lothian, to the Capitol for a courtesy call and luncheon.

Robinson, of Indiana, said he had "nothing against the British Ambassador or his people," but added:

"What difference is there between lobbying, though it be in high circles, for cancellation of the British debt, and the other lobbying you see around the Capitol corridors?"

The Indianan's resolution was placed on the table at the suggestion of the Democratic leader, who said he would ask its reference to the Foreign Relations Committee at some future date.

"I respectfully say to the senator from Indiana," he asserted, "that this isn't a matter that can fairly be prejudged. We can not estop by a declaration now or a reaffirmation of a previous declaration a future Congress from giving such consideration to this subject as it desires.

"Nor can we estop the President or the President-elect from negotiating on it in a manner which the Constitution provides."

Report Not Denied.

In the preamble to his resolution, the Indianan said it currently was reported and not denied that foreign countries were seeking conferences with America for reconsideration of debts, but that Congress had declared a "definite policy" against reduction and foreign nations should not be under "any misapprehension as to the definite position of the United States on this question."

Robinson, of Indiana, during the debate, called attention to President-elect Roosevelt's statement denying as "unfounded" reports that William C. Bullitt was in Great Britain as his agent or that he, Mr. Roosevelt, was committed to an 80 per cent cut in the British obligation.

President's Wife Entertains Mrs. Roosevelt Here Today

Mrs. Hoover Will Show Her Successor as First Lady Over White House to Enable Her to Plan Changes Desired.

(Associated Press.)

Mrs. Herbert Hoover plans to receive as a visitor today Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, her successor as First Lady of the land.

Although no word was available at the White House last night as to when Mrs. Roosevelt would arrive or how long she would stay, it was expected she would reach the Executive Mansion before luncheon.

Mrs. Hoover and Mrs. Roosevelt have known each other for many years, although they have met seldom if at all since the days when their husbands were respectively food administrator and Assistant Secretary of the Navy during the Wilson administration.

Mrs. Hoover expects to show her visitor over the house and its living quarters that she may make plans for arranging this part of the mansion for herself and her family after March 4.

Some changes which could be put into effect before she actually becomes mistress of the Executive Mansion, may be suggested by Mrs. Roosevelt, but if general practice is followed no major alterations will be made until after the inauguration.

Mrs. Roosevelt is familiar with the inside arrangement of the White House—having been a frequent visitor during the Wilson administration—but at least one large alteration has been made since that time. What formerly was an attic has been made into bedrooms, enlarging considerably the capacity of the presidential home for receiving house guests.

ASA JENNINGS DIES ON CHARITY MISSION

Florida Philanthropist Suddenly Stricken Here on Near East Errand.

Less than twelve hours after his arrival in Washington to confer with attaches of the Turkish Embassy, Asa K. Jennings, widely known philanthropist and organizer in Near East relief work, succumbed to a sudden illness while walking near Seventeenth and G streets northwest last night. He died shortly after dark while en route to Emergency Hospital in a taxicab.

Apparently in perfect health, Mr. Jennings left the home of Rear Admiral Mark L. Bristol, U. S. N., at 1621 Massachusetts avenue northwest. A few hours later Admiral Bristol was notified of his death.

Although physicians indicated death was from natural causes, Deputy Coroner A. Magruder McDonald said he would view the body at Chambers' funeral home.

Mr. Jennings arrived here early yesterday from his home in Winter Park, Fla. Admiral Bristol, at whose home he was staying, declared a conference with the Turkish Ambassador was the object of his visit.

Widely known as a philanthropist, Mr. Jennings was active in welfare work and only recently returned from a trip to Turkey. He was executive president of the American Friends of Turkey and spent much of his time in relief work there.

Following the World War, Mr. Jennings went to the Near East to conduct welfare work for the Y. M. C. A. It was during this period that he organized the American Friends of Turkey. Admiral Bristol, whom he met in Turkey, is president of the organization.

Mr. Jennings had often visited Washington, Admiral Bristol said. He has a son, Asa W. Jennings, in New York City, and a daughter in Florida.

dicap" would be. One high official, who refused to permit his name to be used, said, however:

"After all, it is for Congress to lay down policy, but it certainly looks as though they do not want the prohibition law enforced."

The restriction on the purchase of evidence was perhaps the most important of the group from the point of view of the enforcement service. The Federal courts and almost two-thirds of the States require evidence of purchase rather than mere "evidence of observation" of sale.

One of the most important effects of this provision would be in New York City, where actual purchase is required, and some 1,200 cases a month are being made through purchase of evidence by agents. A still further effect would be had in the securing of warrants, where evidence of purchase is made before warrants for raids are issued.

The elimination of undercover men would reach into three categories. The first are those specially adapted to undercover work, such as those acquainted with radio interception work. The second would be those who go to Federal agents with information for sale. The others would be the average of ten men, paid by the bureau and attached to the Metropolitan Police of the District of Columbia for enforcement work in the Capital.

The wire-tapping restriction would cut into only a small number of cases. Of the 90,000 cases made during 1932 by Federal agents, only 101 were on evidence secured by tapping wires. Woodcock has limited this feature of his agents' work to the catching of the large commercial operators of liquor rings.

At a conference in 1931 between Attorney General Mitchell and the House Committee on Expenditures in the executive departments this method of gathering evidence had been approved.

The Federal Diary

By GEORGE D. RILEY

LINDSAY S. PERKINS, senior grade translator of the Department of State, who has favored The Washington Post with some of his short poems, is naturally interested in modern languages. Of the more than 3,400 languages in the world at present, using more than 60 alphabets, only about a score are worthy of study by the average linguist. The Bible has been translated into 600 of them. English is easily the first in point of number of persons speaking it and in the extent of its vocabulary.

L. S. Perkins.

Mr. Perkins says the largest English dictionaries contain about 500,000 words, of which the average scholar knows only 10 per cent or less. He says no man can successfully master more than two or three languages, although some specialists have acquired a fair reading and translating knowledge of a couple of dozen or more.

• • • •

In point of difficulty of learning, Japanese perhaps leads the list. Spanish is generally considered the easiest, although legal Spanish is a real task for the translator. Technical German leads the languages of Europe in difficulty, not excepting the Slavic tongues, including Russian.

Mr. Perkins speaks enthusiastically of Russian, which he has studied nearly 40 years, and finds it a marvel of flexibility, strength and harmonic beauty. "To read the writings of Pushkin, Lermontoff, Nebrassoff and other great Russian poets," says he, "is to enjoy a literature equal that of Shakespeare, Goethe, Hugo and Dante, with a piquant dash of something different. Russian is about as musical as Italian and easier than French for an American to pronounce, although the grammar is difficult.

• • • •

"The translator dreads, however, to encounter the latest of Soviet Russian, which is bristling with synthetically constructed words. Imagine a text containing 20 per cent of such words as Usona (the Esperanto term for the United States of North America). The initials of words strung together make such forms as VGU (Supreme Geodetic Administration), VTSSPS (All-Russian Central Council of Trades Unions), &c.

"A number of Americans in Washington are studying Russian, which is bound to grow in importance from both commercial and literary points of view, although the golden age of Russian literature has been past for some decades. The alphabet has lost about half a dozen letters, and is now quite phonetic, with 30 characters. There is no prospect that Russian, like modern Turkish, will ever be printed in Latin letters."

• • • •

"I am utterly convinced," says Nils A. Olsen, chief, Bureau of Agricultural Economics, "that American agriculture can not get along without its foreign markets. It is wrong to assume we can live without foreign markets. If we are going to sell our goods we will have to take payment in goods or in service of one kind or another, or in gold."

THIS really is a true story except for the name. Quicksilver, so far as I know is not an official name, but is purely fictitious for the purpose of this article. This happened to an acquaintance of mine and I was an eyewitness to the incident.

"Cut-r-rum, cut-r-rum, cut-r-rum," she mimicked in a deep, deep voice as she bent close to the glass tank where a big silver-vested, greenish-coated bullfrog blinked on a moss-covered rock in the artificial sunshine of an electric-light bulb overhead.

Up scrambled old Quicksilver, and about face he turned. He leaned forward, his eyes bulging in amazement. The frogs under the toadstools perked up and sat at attention.

"Cut-r-rum, cut-r-rum, cut-r-rum," came the still deeper notes from the throat of the lady clerk. Zip! Old Quicksilver leaped across the pool, aiming straight at the lady's face; but striking the glass with a thud, fell kersplash into the water.

"Oo-ee!" screamed the horrified lady. Then she nearly convulsed with laughter, while the angry bullfrog went kicking off across the pool.

After all, there probably is as much business to be done in the world and as many orders to be had. Simply it takes twice and sometimes thrice the efforts to get them. Take the case of a Baltimore exporter, who had obtained from Commerce a list of possible German buyers of fish meal.

Within 30 days of receipt of the list the Baltimore exporter had sold $250,000 worth of his goods. That beats sitting down and wondering where business has gone. Business will come to the one who makes it come with redoubled efforts.

Maybe we can expect more propaganda from one side or the other in India, former stamping ground of Swarmi Fedd, close friend of Mahatma Gandhi, especially in hot weather. Just now there's a lot of hurrah about 50 typewriters just ordered from India. Hope they leave the red ribbons off.

Commerce has just been praised for helping to land the order for an American factory.

And are 50 typewriters big business these days? It's enough to start the whistles a-blowing.

Chicago, Jan. 27 (Special).—Weather, a great deal of weather, was the main reason Washka, the homing dog, en route from Sitka to Washington, to attend the Federal Diary ball at the Shoreham February 2, was making progress backward tonight. Heavy winds off the lake front forced Washka to remain stationary at times, although he was pawing at the ground with full strength. He seemed to be running on a treadmill at times.

Covering the distance from Racine to Chicago in the last 24 hours, Washka seemed disheartened. The crowds have shrunken in the towns and cities, on account of the weather. Rain checks have been issued in case Washka returns through the same route.

It has resolved itself into a battle between Washka's strength and the elements. Can he hold out? Will the weather stop him? Can he get to Washington in time for the grand ball?. Third section of the photograph in pieces taken of Washka is shown here:

Record-breaking score was recorded by George C. Hill's Bureau of Standards Engineers in the Federal Bridge League play at the Hotel Carlton recently when they trounced last-place Interstate Stats, 22 to 2. Of the two boards won by the losers, one would have been tied but for a slight mistake pulled by Mr. Hill's own partner. As a result of the victory, the Engineers are now menacing the leaders, the Standards Phychems, for the first half lead, and so are the Treasury Amateurs, who recently defeated the Fixed Nitrogens of Agriculture by 16½ to 7½.

Why Not an Open Chest In Every Federal Building?

Forest Service section, Department of Agriculture Welfare Association, has adopted a plan that has proved successful in getting apparel for the city's needy. A chest has been placed on the first floor of the Atlantic Building and Forest Service members are requested to bring bundle of warm clothing, shoes, or anything useful and place them in "The Open Chest." Once weekly the chestful of bundles is sent to one of the numerous social service organizations for distribution. The chest already has been filled three times and the fourth one is now filling up. In its broadcast over Station WOL last Saturday night the Central Union Mission said that the bundles sent them contained 190 garments.

SEVEN POLICE HURT; WOMAN LEADS RIOT

Chicago, Jan. 27 (A.P.).—Capt. James L. Mooney was felled with an iron bar and six other policemen were hurt today in battling 300 Negro rioters led by a white woman demonstrating in front of an emergency relief station on the South Side.

Two officers were seriously injured. Forty police had been assigned to guard the relief station in anticipation of the demonstration. Bricks and stones soon started to fly. The patrolmen replied with clubs to disperse the rioters. Two wagonloads of prisoners were hauled away.

One policeman suffered a fractured kneecap and another was believed to have received a skull fracture. The rest were bruised and cut.

Two agitators were sent to the Bridewell Hospital for treatment of bruises.

Capt. Mooney said the fighting started when Mary Wernick, 21, struck him behind the head with an iron bar.

Big Publicity Idea Goes Slightly Bla

Third Precinct police are wondering what these publicity agents are going to try next.

Last night word was received at the precinct station that a banner was being placed on the old Russian Embassy at 1126 Sixteenth street northwest. Private H. H. Prince rushed to the scene and found nothing amiss on the premises. But when he got back to the station he was ordered to go back, for another call had been received. Filled with doubts he went back. So when he arrived he could hardly believe his eyes when he saw two colored men attempting to stretch a banner across the front of the building at a second-story height. They fled in a car which apparently was waiting for them.

The banner was carried back to the station. It read: "Rasputin Closed This Embassy, But He is Opening at Loew's Columbia Theater in 'Rasputin and the Empress.'"

U. S. Gasoline Tax Extension Scored

Oil and Auto Bodies Say High Levies Reduce Consumption.

(Associated Press.)

The American Petroleum Institute and the American Automobile Association yesterday registered a vigorous protest before the House Ways and Means Committee against the Collier proposal to extend the Federal gasoline tax for another year.

Charles B. Ames, president of the Petroleum Institute, said that Federal, State, county and local taxes on gasoline were reducing consumption of the commodity and injuring the motor vehicle manufacturing industry.

The Federal 1-cent levy, which expires under existing law on June 30, is expected to return $137,000,000 in revenue during the next fiscal year. It is a major point in the Democratic budget-balancing program. The committee opened hearings on the proposal late yesterday.

Democrats Refuse To Confirm Envoys

(Associated Press.)

Senate Democrats yesterday clung to their policy of not confirming any Hoover appointments except routine promotions, after considering proposed relaxation to permit confirmation of new ministers to Canada, Poland and Czechoslovakia.

Senator Robinson, of Arkansas, the party leader, announced the decision. He said the Democrats had considered at his suggestion the "advisability of confirming the three nominations, but reached the conclusion "that no action is recommended at this time."

President Hoover has nominated Nathan William MacChesney, of Illinois, Minister to Canada; F. Lammot Belin, of Pennsylvania, Ambassador to Poland, and Henry Frank Holthusen, of New York, Minister to Czechoslovakia.

Coast Guard Base To Stay at Mobile

Indefinite Sojourn Slated While New Orleans Site Is Studied.

(Associated Press.)

Temporary headquarters of the Southern Area of the United States Coast Guard will remain in Mobile indefinitely. This was disclosed at Coast Guard headquarters yesterday.

Under the reorganization plan which went into effect January 15, Mobile was designated as temporary headquarters and New Orleans as permanent headquarters to be occupied at a later date.

Rear Admiral Harry G. Hamlet, commandant of the Coast Guard, was out of the city yesterday, but his executive offices said it had been decided to reopen the question of the Southern Area headquarters, and that Mobile would continue to be the temporary headquarters for an indefinite period. No plan to move the headquarters will be carried out, it was said, until the entire question has been gone into thoroughly and another decision reached as to the permanent base.

House Action Near On Bankruptcy Bill

Democratic Leaders Planning to Pass Measure by Suspending Rules.

(Associated Press.)

Plans to pass the McKeown-LaGuardia bankruptcy law revision bill by suspending the House rules Monday were formulated yesterday by Democratic leaders.

Once the House gets the bill through, equally expeditious Senate action will be sought. Unless the bill is radically altered, the belief on Capitol Hill is that President Hoover will sign it.

The drastic suspension of House rules procedure also is to be resorted to on the Glass-Steagall bill to broaden the base of paper eligible for rediscount purposes at Federal Reserve banks. In addition, the Democratic leadership hopes to obtain approval of a one-year extension of the 1-cent gasoline tax, expected to return $137,000,000 in revenue in the next fiscal year.

4 IN ECKLUND DEATH TO BE TRIED FEB. 14

Justice O'Donoghue Refuses Immediate Trial on Arraignment.

Four men, indicted as the slayers of Elner R. Ecklund, paymaster of the Browning Painting Co., subcontractors on the addition to the House Office Building, were arraigned on first degree murder charges in the District Supreme Court yesterday, just one week after Ecklund was shot down as he resisted an attempt to rob him of a $2,000 pay roll.

The men, all of whom were arrested shortly after the shooting by headquarters detectives, entered pleas of not guilty, which is compulsory under the law. They are Claude Myers, 28, and Fewell Workman, 23, both colored, and Albert E. Cash, 20, and Everett Blackwell, 22.

Shortly after the quartet had been arraigned, two others, Clyde E. Templeton, 30, and Oscar M. Cash, brother-in-law and brother of Albert Cash, were arraigned on an indictment charging them with being accessories after the fact. The allegation against them is that they assisted the others in disposing of the weapons allegedly used by Fewell and Workman and Claude Myers in shooting Ecklund and wounding his assistant, who is still in the hospital. They also pleaded not guilty.

Assistant United States Attorney William H. Collins, who will prosecute the case, asked that an immediate trial be set, but Justice Daniel W. O'Donoghue refused, stating that the men were entitled to a reasonable time to prepare their defense. He set February 14 as the date of trial for the four accused of murder. No date was set for the others.

Unusual Trial Offer On A Mouthwash and Gargle By Makers of Vicks VapoRub

Proof of the quality and economy of the new Vicks Voratone Antiseptic—for halitosis (bad breath), oral hygiene and other antiseptic uses—is offered in an actual test.

In order that every user of a mouthwash and gargle may test it, the makers have supplied druggists with five million bottles of a trial size at actually less than cost of manufacture. This trial size is a 25c value, but is priced at only 10c—while the supply lasts.

No extravagant claims are made for Vicks Antiseptic. It is simply the best oral antiseptic Vicks Chemists could produce. And they were aided by the scientific experts of their 16 allied organization, here and abroad.

They examined the whole field of oral antiseptics. Some they found were too weak. A few were far too strong for regular use in the mouth. Most were very good. But all were much too expensive. So they produced a balanced antiseptic. Mild enough to use daily without risk to delicate membranes. Strong enough to do everything an oral antiseptic can and should do.

And Vicks Antiseptic has this additional unique advantage . . . born in a depression year, it is priced accordingly. The regular size is a large 10-ounce bottle—a 75c value—but is priced at only 35c.—Adv.

GRAIN DEALERS OPEN ALLOTMENT ATTACK

Cotton Spinners Also Assail Plan at Senate Quiz; Revolution Seen.

(Associated Press.)

From grain dealers and cotton spinners, the Senate Agriculture Committee yesterday heard outspoken objections to the domestic allotment farm relief bill.

In a telegram from Thomas R. Cain, Bloomington, Ill., president of the Farmer's National Grain Dealers Association, the bill was assailed as "a huge, costly experiment, a price-fixing, tax-increasing measure, doubtful in accomplishment and requiring huge administrative machinery."

"It places Washington officialdom in direct control of every farm in the country," said the wire placed in the record by Chairman McNary (Republican), Oregon. "The farmers lose control of their own affairs under such a plan.

Revolution Is Brewing.

"A country revolution is growing, not against government, but against false farm leadership trying to hang upon us an allotment plan or other unsound legislative experiments."

Testifying before the committe, witnesses representing the American and the National Cotton Manufacturers Associations were emphatic in asserting the bill would prove a deadly boomerang to the cotton farmer, reduce cotton consumption by raising prices and add to unemployment by forcing the closing of many textile plants.

William D. Anderson, of Macon, Ga., one of these witnesses who was questioned sharply by Senator Frazier (Republican), North Dakota, when he said the farmer "relatively speaking is not in a much worse fix than his neighbor in the city."

Remonetization of Silver.

Anderson said he was a farmer himself, remarking he was "sorry to say so," and that he had a great deal of sympathy with the plight of the agriculturist. Frazier asserted however that Anderson was talking more from "the standpoint of the cotton manufacturer than the farmer."

In questioning the witness, Senator Wheeler (Democrat), Montana, sponsor of 16-1 silver legislation, expressed the view that remonetization of silver would benefit the cotton industry by restoring purchasing power of silver-using countries.

Hearings Resumed Today.

As to the allotment plan, Wheeler said, "I am frank to say I am a little doubtful that this legislation will work out so as to help the farmer, but certainly something has got to be done in the way of increasing the price level."

Prospects last night were that hearings on the bill, resuming today, would continue throughout next week. Meat packers are preparing to voice vigorous opposition to the measure.

As passed by the House it provides for a tax on the packer or other processor the money to go to the farmer in an amount sufficient to bring his price to the prewar level on condition he cuts production 20 per cent.

FRYING IN DEEP FAT NO EASY OPERATION

Major Faults Are Found in Temperature, Too Much or Too Little.

By MARTHA LOGAN.

Every time a delectable dish of doughnuts comes into view the story of the distraught housewife, who thought there was magic in fats, comes to mind. It seems she was blessed with a husband who thought the sun rose and set on doughnuts. But Mrs. Housewife, for some reason, could only cause her husband to have a severe case of indigestion after eating her doughnuts. The lady of this sad tale, thinking the fat she was using was to blame, kept changing her brand and type of fat. Her husband still continued to have indigestion and finally suggested that the nearby bakery doughnuts were the best.

There are two ways a person can be wrong in deep-fat frying, and both unfortunately affect the wholesomeness of the food. Both of these major faults fall under the importance of temperature. If you fry (deep-fat fry) your food in fat that is not hot enough or fat that is too hot, you are committing one of two cardinal errors.

If the fat is not hot enough, it does not seal the outside surface quickly. Thereupon the food begins to absorb more than its share of fat and becomes neither palatable nor wholesome. If, however, to counteract this evil, you heat the fat too high until it begins to send up one of those Indian signal fire smokes—you are causing the fat to decompose. The actual decomposition substances formed are irritating, thought to impair digestion, and the food is usually scorched and half cooked.

Before Fat Smokes.

How then are you to know when to put the food in the fat if you must get it in before the fat smokes yet not before the fat has reached the necessary temperature? Your kitchen should never be smoky and your food should always be cooked correctly if you follow a few simple practices.

When a high temperature is needed—a temperature for merely browning not cooking—select a fat or oil that has a high smoke temperature. By a high smoke temperature we mean a fat that can be heated to a very high degree before it begins to smoke. The best grades of lard, or any of the well recognized brands of fats and oils will prove satisfactory for this purpose.

Croquettes (rice, egg, cheese, fish, or meat), sea foods, timbals, croutons, and potatoes (French fried, chips, shoe string, lattice) are best at this higher temperature.

But back to the fat. Temperature, as we said before, is of major importance after you have selected the fat. The results are often spoiled by wrong temperatures. You cannot guess in deep fat frying. The use of a frying thermometer is the best remedy against failures and disappointment. Then you can know the exact temperature. Most hardware stores carry inexpensive thermometers.

By Bread Cube Test.

However, if you feel a thermometer is out of question, use the bread cube test. Cut one-inch cubes of bread and immerse one or two in the fat. If the fat is hot enough to turn the cubes golden brown in sixty seconds, the temperature is just about 375 degrees Fahrenheit; if the cubes turn golden brown in about forty seconds the temperature is between 390 and 400 Fahrenheit, and if the cubes of bread brown in slightly more than sixty seconds you have a temperature around 360 degrees.

Raw foods, such as meat patties, chops and cutlets, should be fried at the lowest temperature. Doughnuts (spiced, plain chocolate or fruit), crullers and fruit or vegetable fritters should have the medium temperature of 375 degrees Fahrenheit.

In actual frying, use about three pounds of a solid fat or two quarts of an oil to a four or five quart pan. Then your foods will be sufficiently covered. If you exercise care in deep-fat frying, do not allow the fat to smoke, and carefully strain the fat after using it—you will find it to be sufficient for many deep-fat fryings.

When frying the food and using a basket, put only enough food into the frying basket to just cover the bottom. A quantity of cold foods lowers the frying temperature a great deal. Then, too, if the foods are crowded they can not brown or cook correctly.

Check With Each Batch.

Check the temperature of the fat before each batch of food is fried so that you are sure the temperature is right.

A little spattering and sputtering can not be avoided. If you use a deep frying kettle and the amount of fat suggested, you should have little trouble with the fat bubbling over.

So that you will have the minimum amount of sputtering, foods with wet surfaces, such as potatoes and onions, should be dried in clean towels before frying. Croquettes are dipped in crumbs, a little egg, and then crumbs again, and allowed to dry slightly before frying.

Let as much fat drain from the foods as possible by lifting the frying basket out of the kettle and allowing it to rest on the edge. Then drain the foods again on unglazed paper.

So many leftover foods and unappealing foods can be made attractive by using them in croquettes and the like and deep fat frying. All you need to do is to watch your temperatures!

Iron Pipe Contract Let.

The United States Pipe & Foundry Co., of Philadelphia, was awarded a contract yesterday by the District Commissioners for furnishing certain cast-iron water pipe.

Martha Logan Says — — — "Try Turkey a la King"

In almost every part of the United States turkey is much less per pound than chicken. When you figure that there is between two and three times as much meat on turkey as there is on several chickens of the same weight—that's something! Nor are turkeys any more trouble to cook than chicken. For instance, in making turkey a la king, instead of putting two chickens on to boil, place one turkey (without a stuffing) in a roasting pan and roast in a slow oven (300 degrees F.) for 20 minutes per pound. For this recipe, an 8 to 10 pound turkey will be ample, with some nice pieces of meat left for luncheon sandwiches the next day.

When the turkey is done, slip the skin off and pull the meat from the bones. Dice some of the white or dark meat—or both—and measure four cups of it. Put this to one side while you make the "a la king" part. This consists of making a cream sauce with lots of good things added.

To do this, melt about 3 tablespoons of fat in the top of a double boiler. Add to this 1 cup of fresh or canned mushrooms, sliced; ½ of a green pepper, chopped, and cook 5 minutes. Then blend in 6 tablespoons of flour, 1 teaspoon of salt, and suggestion of pepper. Stir in 4 cups of rich milk and cook 10 minutes, or until the sauce is fairly thick.

Now comes the finishing touch. Add the 4 cups of turkey and 1 pimiento, shredded. Heat this until turkey is well heated through. Then serve on toast, in patty shells, or on tea rusks. This recipe will just make enough to serve two tables of bridge or a family of eight—just as you wish to use it.

Market Meanderings

By MILDRED REED BUNDY

Spring Lamb With All Delicious Cuts Now Available; Olive Oil Is Recommended at Two Italian Shops; Strawberry Pies Featured.

Spring lamb—with spring in the offing—is soon to be plentiful. This choice meat has begun now to find its way through meat shops to the tables of lamb fanciers. The saddles of spring lamb and the crown roasts of lamb the Meanderer described recently as coming from one of Washington's highest class meat markets have attracted interested correspondents.

Today the thick English lamb chop for baking is one of the chief suggestions gathered in the meanderings. The excellence of the lamb roasts and saddles and the charms of the English lamb chops are so difficult to convey in print that the Meanderer extracted a promise from the meat marketer in the shop just mentioned to supply the Meanderer's readers with several recipes for preparation of spring lamb. The satisfaction of knowing that the recipes are to come from a meat dealer who has served probably tons of fancy lamb to the White House is to accompany this free information offered. Address the Market Meanderer, The Washington Post, inclosing a self-addressed, stamped envelope if you would like to have the lamb recipes.

Truffles are recommended for consideration by an interested Meanderings reader. This correspondent uses truffles in a combination with eggs he terms "Eggs Marguerite," with most delectable sound. The "he" in the last sentence was used advisedly, for this expert on truffle cookery is masculine. Apparently the masculine touch is effective on this recipe, for the correspondent states that Japanese and Chinese chefs do wonders with "Eggs Marguerite." The recipe for this bit of cookery is available, too, for the asking, if readers will address the Meanderer as indicated in the above paragraph. Furthermore, a fascinating corner in a big market on K street has truffles for sale. They are packed in small tins, in sizes costing 60 cents and $1.35.

Good truffles, writes a cookery expert, are distinguishable by their agreeable aroma. They are light weight for their size and are elastic when pressed with the finger. The Meanderer has concluded that truffles are exclusively an imported product, for in the archives of food information in the United States Department of Agriculture there is no literature on the subject. Truffles grow underground in France and Belgium, are considered a relation of the mushroom, and are regarded highly by food connoisseurs.

Not far from the corner counter, where the interesting small tins of truffles are sold, is the business place of the young Italian who is supplying Meanderings readers with ingredients for home-made antipasto, for which he also is furnishing recipes through The Washington Post. This young food seller is delighted with the response from Post readers to his suggestion for making antipasto at home, in the correct way outlined by the Italian women of his family. Antipasto, as all users of this delightful Italian appetizer know, is expensive if it is served in more than two or three servings, costing in its commercial glass or tin preserving containers much more than the home-made variety will cost.

The Meanderer wishes she could tell you the exact brand of the canned goods one chain store is offering at special prices this week. Only on the telephone—National 4205, Extension 52—is she allowed to relay such definite information as brand names. But the housewife who knows this particular brand of food is on sale will undoubtedly want to expand her larder to take advantage of the extraordinary values in this canned goods special, ending today.

Tomato juice in this brand is selling six cans for 45 cents; the usual 19-cent size corned beef is selling two for 29 cents, and 19-cent corned-beef hash is also two for 29 cents; canned chile, also of the same brand, is selling two tins for 15 cents, and the small tins of good potted meat for sandwiches, also under this well-known label, are offered three for 10 cents. Two other brands used on pork and beans mean something, too, when the price is six cans for 25 cents.

Olive oil, chosen for its excellence as only Italians can choose it, is imported and packed for selling under a choice label by an Italian dealer in a market on K street at prices most reasonable. Food values of olive oil do not need to be listed for the Meanderer's readers, discriminating as she has found them to be through the lively interest in foods they evince in their letters. But she would direct their attention to this special importation of high class olive oil packed by the local dealer as one of the best values of the sort to be found. As a special introductory offer this dealer will allow for a short time a price of 45 cents for a pint of this olive oil.

Fresh strawberry pies of a kind the Meanderer is sure she has never seen, because they are very new in Washington, are selling for 25 and 50 cents in a G street pastry shop, every day. The pies are a novelty for January and are priced so reasonably because of the phenomenally low cost of winter strawberries. Genuine whipped cream and fresh strawberries are guaranteed ingredients of these fluffy deserts, with no substitutes or coloring matter used.

Cheese pies coming from the G street shop are as interesting as the strawberry pies. Cottage cheese and eggs combine nourishingly as well as most palatably in this pie, and its top is dusted with cinnamon. The price of these is 25 and 50 cents.

Large quantities of patty shells of the best of pastry are sold at reduced prices for parties, according to a woman in charge of a well-known bake shop in a market on K street. Individually the patty shells sell for 5 cents each. At this baked foods counter there is one of the most complete arrays of bread the Meanderer finds in her food searches. She features an excellent crushed-wheat loaf, French water bread, French Vienna bread, rye bread and almost any brand of white bread produced in Washington or vicinity.

Small, whole canned green beans, such as many prefer to the large, cut canned beans, have been reduced greatly in price in recent months. A recognized brand of the small beans sells for only 15 cents in a chain store. Four cans of the large cut green beans are selling this week in the same store for 25 cents.

The pecan rolls that are so popular in two bake places in the shopping district are today priced again at 29 cents a dozen. In these two shops, one on Fourteenth street and one on F street, other tempting specials today are Lady Baltimore cake at 59 cents, and cherry pies for 29 cents, made from fresh, frozen oversize cherries.

Anchovies rolled with capers and costing much less than anchovy fanciers would imagine are among the imported food offerings in a shop on Ninth street, featuring Italian and Greek foods. Here, too, the best of Italian olive oil in a shipment just over from Italy is ready for customers.

The Meanderer saw the piles of olive oil in its various sized tins, from gallons to half pints, and is convinced that this olive oil at $2.25 a gallon, 75 cents a quart, 50 cents a pint and 25 cents a half pint, is unmistakably excellent value.

Telephone questions about Market Meanderings to The Washington Post, National 4205, Extension 52; or address the Market Meanderer, The Washington Post, inclosing self-addressed, stamped envelope for reply.

UNITED FOOD STORES ANNUAL EXHIBIT SET

Elaborate Show Will Open for Week on Feb. 11 at Auditorium.

The second annual food exposition of the United Food Stores, now comprising nearly 150 local affiliated grocers, will be held in the Washington Auditorium the week of February 11 to 18, it was announced by Morris L. Kraft, president of the organization.

Contemplated on a scale more elaborate than the initial show, the exposition this year, according to the committee on arrangements of the grocers' group, will be marked by the award of several thousand dollars' worth of handsome prizes and the distribution of large quantities of foodstuff to patrons of the show. The major award will be a 1933 automobile, to be given away the closing night.

A number of distinguished guests will be invited to attend the opening of the week-long exposition, including high officials of the Government and leading citizens.

Throughout the show authorities in domestic fields will give a series of demonstrations and discussions on food and household problems. Entertainment programs will take place on a specially constructed stage in the center of the Auditorium floor.

Encouraged by the success of the baby contest, which was an outstanding feature of the show last year, the sponsors of the exposition have decided to repeat this event this year, and arrangements are being made to provide handsome cups as prizes. Other contests, with a variety of awards, including electric refrigerators, radios and other household appliances, will be conducted.

Officers of the United Food Stores are Mr. Kraft, president; Morris Vigderhouse, vice president; George C. Heider, treasurer; David J. Hornstein, secretary and counsel, and Sam Goldstein, general manager. Directors are the foregoing and J. A. Pearson, R. Pyles, L. Kaplan, J. Reihl, H. Cohen, Joseph Muchnick, I. Bindeman, A. $5 POST PRIZE WON BY ORANGE DESSERT

Very Delicious and Pretty, Mrs. C. M. Shisler Writes.

"Oranges a la Menton" is described as very pretty as well as a delicious dessert by Mrs. C. M. Shisler, of 1909 L street northwest, who submitted her recipe for it in the weekly contest of The Post. She was awarded the $5 first prize.

(Awarded $5 Prize.)

Serves 6.

1 tablespoon Knox gelatin
¼ cup cold water
¼ cup hot apricot juice
1 cup apricot puree
¾ cup orange juice
¼ cup lemon juice
¾ cup granulated sugar
1 teaspoon grated orange peel
2 egg whites, Sanico.

Soak gelatin in the cold water for 5 minutes. Add hot apricot juice and stir until gelatin dissolves. Make apricot puree by putting apricots through potato ricer or sieve. In preparing orange juice, squeeze juice out carefully so skins may be used for finished dessert. Add sugar to gelatin mixture, then apricot puree, juices and orange peel. When this begins to thicken fold into stiffly beaten egg whites. Heap this dessert in orange skins or sherbet glasses and chill in ice box.

All ingredients may be purchased at any Sanitary grocery store.

DEPRECIATED CURRENCY.

Trade competition from nations that are using depreciated currencies will continue to be a serious problem for the United States until the gold standard is restored by all the great powers. Congress may act to protect American industries that are being ruined by cheap imports, but depreciated currency nations would still be in a position to undermine American export trade. Until the British pound, the Japanese yen and other fluctuating currencies are stabilized at a reasonable value, international trade will be in a precarious condition.

Settlement of the world's most serious economic problems would give depreciated currencies an opportunity to find their true levels of value. Considerable hope is entertained that progress toward this goal may be made at the Washington war debt conferences and the world economic conference. But it is apparent that restabilization of foreign currencies will be a long and painful process. In the meantime it is imperative that the United States take steps to protect itself against the competition of cheap imports from these countries.

Minority Leader Snell has started a movement in the House to make the tariff effective against imports from countries off the gold standard. At present many importers are paying only 40 per cent, or even less, of the duties that were contemplated in the Smoot-Hawley act. When this advantage is added to the advantage of buying raw materials and paying for labor with currency worth only a fraction of its normal value, foreign manufacturers are able to sell their output in the American market for much less than it costs to make the same goods in this country. Democrats as well as Republicans are beginning to see the menace in this situation and are seeking for remedial measures.

The movement to protect American industry and agriculture against competition of this kind is not designed to increase tariff rates, but only to make effective the rates already in the law. At present importers, especially those of Japan, enjoy advantages that Congress never intended to give them. For this reason Congress could put depreciated currency nations on an equal footing with all other countries without inviting tariff retaliation. France and Canada have already taken such action, and no one considers their measures provocative.

Aside from giving protection to American industry and saving the jobs of probably 1,000,000 men, adjustment of the tariff to offset depreciated currencies would have a wholesome effect on the countries which are taking advantage of this expedient to extend their trade. So long as these countries can enlarge their markets and reap profits at the expense of gold standard nations, there is not much incentive for them to stabilize their currencies. The United States ought to put them on notice that they will not be allowed to demoralize American industry in this manner. Such a step might give more impetus to monetary stabilization than revision of the debts.

A BEER BILL JOKER.

The Senate judiciary committee is so enthusiastic about the 3.05 per cent beer that it has concocted that it would keep the public in ignorance of the new beverage. The committee accepted an amendment by Senator Dill, providing that beer and wine could not be advertised in the so-called "dry" States.

What does the committee hope to accomplish by this amendment? The purpose of the beer bill is to raise revenue. Yet it would drastically limit advertisement of what purports to be a wholesome, lawful drink, thereby restricting its market and reducing the revenue to be derived from its sale. Having discovered the secret of extracting taxes while making the public happy, the savants of the judiciary committee propose to hide their light under a bushel.

It is obvious that the committee remembers the high-pressure advertising methods used by the liquor interests in pre-prohibition days. But is that any reason for restricting the advertisement of wholesome, non-intoxicating, lawful beer and wine? The committee made an exhaustive investigation into inebriating potency of 3.05 per cent beer and found it to be as harmless as milk or orange juice. Then it suddenly threw off that pretense and decided to protect the "dry" States against even hearing about the proposed new beer.

The committee seems to be afraid that families in the "dry" States should not be told by some radio announcer that beer without any kick is available across the border. Does it fear that dry States should be demoralized by a non-intoxicant? If the stuff they propose to legalize is in reality harmless, why is it a crime to advertise it?

Senator Dill's amendment confirms the view that the concealed purpose of the Senate beer bill is to nullify the eighteenth amendment and make the Volstead act ineffective.

ECONOMY PIPE DREAMS.

Senator Tydings' attempt to bring the general demand for economy to the actual point of lopping a few hundred millions of dollars from the appropriation bills was doomed to failure from the beginning. Economy can not be achieved simply by telling the appropriations committee of the Senate to mutilate the supply bills. Under the direction of Senator Robinson the Senate Democrats wisely refused to commit themselves to such a farcical program.

At the conclusion of the Democratic caucus the economy drive was right back at the point from which it started. The Democrats had agreed to reduce expenditures to a level with revenue "at the earliest practicable time." In other words, a general policy of economy was once more approved without any definite commitments. This policy will doubtless have a beneficial effect upon the conduct of the Senate, but it would be folly to suppose that the budget can be balanced by this method.

The first essential factor in any plan of reducing Government expenditures was completely ignored in Senator Tyding's resolution and in the policy formulated by the Democratic caucus. Only meager economies can be made by hacking appropriation bills, because the most extravagant appropriations are authorized by law, and they can not be changed without action of both houses on the law itself, as distinguished from appropriation bills. With its authority to cut only those items that are not fixed by law, the appropriations committee could not reduce expenditures by $500,000,000 without abolishing the Government departments. Of course, there is no time to revise these laws at the present session, and there is no disposition to revise them at any time, because Congress is afraid to displease groups that maintain powerful lobbies.

It is significant that while the Senate was considering the Tydings resolution the House appropriations committee reported out the Independent Offices supply bill, carrying an increase of $18,000,000 for veterans' relief. No sincere effort has been made by either party to cut down the $1,000,000,000 expenditure on veterans. If Senator Tydings' motion had prevailed, virtually nothing could have been cut from this item, although it would have absorbed, under his plan, about one-third of the entire budget.

The only certain way to economy is the repeal of indefensible laws that drain the Treasury. Why doesn't Senator Tydings devote his energy to abolition of the dole to ex-soldiers who suffered no injury in the war? Does he really favor crippling the Government so that doles may continue to be paid? The public has heard too many deceptive promises that the budget will be balanced by slashing the appropriation bills or by abolishing useless bureaus. In this critical hour Congress ought not to trifle with such nonsense. If senators are really sincere in their efforts to economize, let them apply the ax where hundreds of millions are squandered, and not where it would destroy vital agencies of government.

THE ALUMINUM AGE.

It is now predicted that, just as the world has passed through the successive ages of bronze, iron and steel, the next dominant metal will be aluminum. Experts estimate that the light, white metal is by far the most abundant of all, exceeding even iron ore, and that for every pound of copper existing in the earth there are two tons of aluminum. Prof. Fink, head of electrochemistry at Columbia University, tells the American Institute of Electrical Engineers that in another ten years the output of aluminum will equal the peak output of copper, or 600,000 tons a year.

The use of aluminum has been greatly expanded in recent years. In many industries it is supplanting iron and tin for various uses. Aluminum plate is now being developed which is said to have many advantages over tin plate. The lightness and durability of aluminum; now that modern methods of extraction have been developed, with consequent cheapening of its cost, make it adaptable to many uses.

The wide distribution of bauxite, the aluminum ore, assures its increasing utilization. While the deposits of other metals are comparatively limited, the recoverable supply of aluminum is estimated to be sufficient for all possible needs of mankind for centuries to come. The use of this white metal will be intimately connected with the expansion of the electrical industry, for it is not only largely used in the manufacture of all kinds of electrical apparatus, but is extracted from bauxite now almost exclusively by electrical process.

THE IRISH ELECTION.

Ireland has again put President Eamon de Valera in the saddle with a much firmer grip upon the Dail than he has ever had before. It is probable that he will have a clear majority. At any rate he will be able to carry out the policies that were announced during the campaign with the aid of the Labor party, which also gained strength. Ex-President Cosgrave's party was substantially weakened. It is evident that the Free State has taken de Valera and his radical program to her bosom.

One of the strange aspects of the election was the heavy vote cast for President de Valera in the rural areas where farmers are suffering from the trade war with England. The victory for the administration will undoubtedly widen the breach between London and Dublin, and may result in more drastic tariff restrictions against Irish cattle and other agricultural products. But the farmers and cattlemen have absorbed Mr. de Valera's enthusiasm for a "united, independent and self-sufficient Ireland". Apparently they have waived economic considerations to gratify their aspirations for entire independence.

Abolition of the oath to King George can now be completed, and President de Valera may be expected to assume a more arbitrary attitude toward the land annuities owed to Great Britain. He is also pledged to get rid of the governor general, who represents the British crown at Dublin. By these gradual steps Dr. de Valera and his followers expect to complete the divorce between Britain and the Free State and to set up an independent Irish nation when the proper time comes.

Northern Ireland, which is not a part of the Free State, is somewhat alarmed at the success of this nationalistic movement. Ulster has no desire to sever her ties with Great Britain, and will not submit to domination by the Free State. Yet the de Valera government is determined to absorb Ulster into the contemplated Irish republic. The hope of winning over the northern counties is doubtless an important reason why the Fianna Fail is moving gradually toward a republic instead of suddenly breaking away from Britain.

This situation is more disquieting than the schism between the Free State and Great Britain. At present there seems to be no way in which Mr. de Valera can accomplish his purposes without embroiling Northern Ireland, and thus forcing the British to take a hand in the dispute.

A FARM MIRACLE.

From Nebraska, in the very midst of the distress area, comes the encouraging if surprising report of a great cooperative farm organization that even last year was operated at a profit. The Nebraska Farmers' State Exchange did a business of $106,000,000, which was only exceeded in the State by the income of the Union Pacific Railroad. Various other railroads, the great packing interests, the banks and wholesale houses were all outdistanced by this efficient farm organization.

The exchange is the operating unit of the Nebraska Farmers' Union, not an offspring of the Farm Board, but a cooperative movement that has been in successful operation for years. It sells live stock and grain and operates grain elevators and creameries. It not only sells farm products, but also buys in wholesale quantities machinery, gasoline, clothing, hardware, paint, tires, &c., for its farm associates. The chief retail establishment of the exchange is in Omaha, but scattered throughout the State it has twelve branch stores and is affiliated with seventy-six other exchanges.

These farmers have their own commission house at the Omaha stockyards, as well as at Sioux City and St. Joseph. They handled 25,000 carloads of stock, and even at last year's low prices made a profit of $152,000. The creameries, too, were operated at a profit. Products are purchased at the various exchanges at market prices, and at the end of the year the sellers are given a "patronage" dividend, all profits except a reasonable reserve fund being divided. The farmers of this big cooperative enterprise claim to have learned from their experience that the way for the farmer to get out of his predicament is to do it by his own effort.

THE LETICIA DISPUTE.

The dispute between Peru and Colombia over the upper Amazon port of Leticia has called forth notes from Secretary of State Stimson and the council of the League of Nations, addressed to Peru, urging that government to abide by its treaty obligations. Peru is in the inconsistent position of giving assurance that it respects the treaty of 1922 and also the Briand-Kellogg anti-war pact, and yet permitting her citizens to fortify the seized territory. The only excuse for government support of the Peruvians of the Loreto district, who hold Leticia, was offered by the Peruvian Ambassador last week, when he explained that "the Loretanos are determined to oppose forcibly any use of force by Colombia, and Peru can not stand by passively when the interests of Loreto are at stake."

This puts the Peruvian government squarely behind the Peruvians who occupy Leticia and are determined to hold it by force. It ignores the fact that the Peruvians invaded territory which Peru admits is the property of Colombia. In sending a force to reoccupy Leticia Colombia is clearly within her rights. Peru can not offer a single argument in support of her position except the lame excuse that the Peruvians in the vicinity of Leticia are not satisfied with the boundaries established by treaty.

The League of Nations has directed a message to the Lima government declaring it to be Peru's duty not to hinder Colombian authorities in the full exercise of "sovereignty and jurisdiction in the territory recognized by treaty to belong to Colombia." Brazil has offered her good offices in the dispute, agreeing to take over temporary control of Leticia and restore its jurisdiction to Colombia, this action to be followed by a conference in Rio de Janeiro between Colombia and Peru for the purpose of considering the Salomon-Lozano treaty "in a broad spirit of conciliation."

Peru is offered a fair opportunity to reopen the question of the Leticia boundary through a conference on neutral ground. Its position will become very precarious if it declines this offer and attempts to retain possession of foreign territory. If hostilities at Leticia should develop into war, Peru would run into international difficulties of the gravest character.

Senator Robinson of Indiana objects to the presence of the British Ambassador in the Senate chamber. It appears that Senator Robinson of Arkansas invited the Ambassador in, forgetting that under the rules gentlemen are not admitted.

Peru refuses to withdraw from a neighbor's territory. If it isn't careful it will receive a sharp note from Japan protesting against infringement of copyright.

Congress experiences many excruciating pains, but the worst are those that come from economitis.

POST HASTE

Senators Glass and Walsh are not exactly the kind of Cabinet kids recommended by Col. House, but they have good ideas that will always be young.

Huey Long tells New York that if his plan did not cure the depression in six weeks he would get out of public life. It's worth trying!

"Ruined" French farmers are storming Paris because the government has allowed the price of wheat to drop to $1.20 a bushel. Page Senator Capper.

In connection with governmental reorganization it is fortunate that overlapping Presidents have already been eliminated.

Representative Goldsborough makes it clear that the Glass bill will be satisfactory to him if he can just replace the sound branch banking clause with one for unsound money.

"Social" visits of the British Ambassador to the Senate is probably one of the surest ways to have debt deals fall down and go boomerang.

Proposed farm relief begins to total quite a tidy sum: A billion in price bonuses, a billion in direct aid, a billion in tax reductions, a billion in interest reduction and five billions in mortgage reductions.

"Roosevelt plans one commission to handle all transportation." It would be some commission to handle and some commission required to handle it.

Feeling the need of a little preliminary practice, Jim Farley is in Albany to take the jobs away from appointees named by the up-State faction.

Pat Harrison is a forward-looking senator. He is inaugurating an exhaustive study of economic ills that will be ripe for the next depression.

France expects to slip into the debt conference in John Bull's pocket. But we also have pocket vetoes over here.

JUST FOLKS

By EDGAR A. GUEST

ONE KINDLY DEED.

He went his way and never knew
How much his words had thrilled him through,
He'd merely stopped upon the street
To buy a newsboy's printed sheet
And something put it in his mind
That day to be a little kind.

"My boy, 'tis cold you look," said he.
I'll buy for you a winter cap,
And since all day you thread the street
I'll put new rubbers on your feet."

He never knew just why the whim
For such a kindness came to him,
But he was happy for the day
And whistling went upon his way;
Took train for home and never guessed
What seed he'd planted in a breast

Day after day, year after year,
Watched one for him to reappear.
The boy to manhood grown still scanned
The faces of the public, and Cherished the hope that ere life's end
He'd meet once more his kindly friend.

They never met. But in his name
That boy when he a man became
On many a blustery, wintry day
Gave caps and overshoes away
In memory of the passing whim
Of one who'd been so kind to him.

By ROBERT QUILLEN

My dear Louise. You didn't hear Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt's radio talk about girls and liquor, but you have heard it discussed for weeks and now I wish to add my word.

She said, as you remember, "The average girl of today faces the problem of learning, very young, how much she can drink of such things as whisky and gin, and sticking to the proper quantity."

Understand, first of all, that Mrs. Roosevelt did not mean to advocate or defend drinking by young girls. She meant only to describe a condition that she considered deplorable.

But her choice of words was unfortunate and her advice, if such it was, is wholly and indefensibly wrong.

If any law under heaven compelled girls to drink it would certainly be advisable for them to test their capacity in private and thus avoid the shame and danger of being overcome in public.

But there is no reason why the average girl or any girl should drink at all. If millions of men let liquor alone, despite the fact that other millions drink, why should the average girl find it necessary to learn her capacity?

It would be as reasonable to say, since some girls think chastity old fashioned, that the average young girl should "pet" and "neck" to see how far she can go without losing it.

I am not ignorant of the effect of whisky. From the age of 19 to the age of 35 I considered it my privilege to drink when and where I pleased.

While hope remained that it would work, I favored prohibition for those who needed it. The man who can't be trusted to drive a car should be denied the privilege of driving. That's the way I felt about liquor, but I reserved the right to take a drink myself so long as I was neither a nuisance nor a menace to anybody else.

But I know that one drink changes a sober man's mental processes. It makes him in some degree bolder, more reckless. And in that degree he is drunk.

The quantity a girl can drink and remain wholly sober is none, and "sticking to the proper quantity" therefore means sticking to beverages that have no kick.

You have done fairly well so far without drinking. If some social group refuses to admit you because you don't drink, let me assure you that you have nothing but a headache to lose by staying out. Love, DAD.

POLITICAL COMMENT

New York State a Beggar?

New York Herald Tribune.

What Gov. Lehman forgets in his demand for Federal money is that as he stands at the United States Treasury in Washington, his cup in hand, he will be simply the head of a procession.

There may be somewhere a State so honest, so self-respecting, that it will refuse to follow Mr. Lehman's example. But we can't for the life of us see why any State should not follow. If the richest and most powerful of the States becomes a mendicant, why should any other State hold back?

Roosevelt Carries On.

Boston Transcript.

The apparently authoritative announcement that President-elect Roosevelt has signified his approval and his future maintenance of the "Stimson doctrine" that the United States can not recognize territorial acquisitions resting on armed conquest is in harmony with the principle that party divisions end at the sea's edge, and that foreign policy is essentially continuous. There can be little doubt that our policy in the Far East will be unchanged, as there is no question that such a condition is essential to the country's right and dignity. Such an attitude, for that matter, as that the force of the Kellogg-Briand peace pact must not be impaired by changes of party control is not a policy, but is a national principle. There is no mandate in the Kellogg-Briand pact for armed enforcement of the interdict on invasive warfare, but the principle involved remains a part of the Nation's doctrine and must influence international sentiment. As President, Mr. Roosevelt would certainly occupy an anomalous position if he proceeded to nullify such a national declaration.

When Was It Otherwise?

Florida Times-Union.

New York Journal of Commerce.

Let us insist upon facing the fact that farm relief which comes out of the shrinking profits of industry and the ill-filled pockets of the masses is not genuine relief. What the farmer needs is wider markets for his products. He will not obtain them by a plan which aims to obtain for him by artifice a larger share of a much-reduced national income. Prosperity on the farm can not be restored by picking the pockets of the penniless city dweller.

Installing a President.

Kansas City Star.

It is explained that, under the "lame duck" amendment, the inauguration of a President is set for January 20, rather than for January 3 (the day on which Congress meets), simply because the President has not yet been elected by the earlier date. He must wait for that until Congress meets, canvasses the electoral votes of the States, tallies them and formally announces the results. That being the case, it is inaccurate, constitutionally speaking, to refer to a President-elect for about two months following the November decision. As everybody wants to follow the Constitution, it would be correct to say, for example, "The President-to-be-elected, when, as and if Congress meets and takes the required action."

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The propaganda that the solution of America's economic welfare depends on its foreign trade is bunk. The total of our export trade at its best has never been more than 7 per cent of our domestic trade. The total of our import trade has never been more than 6 per cent of our domestic trade. As the total of our export and import trade is a very small fraction of the world's trade, exclusive of our part, it is idle to suggest that our prosperity depends on trade of any kind with the rest of the world.

The nations owing us money can not be depending wholly on their exports to us as the only source of net money-profit they enjoy from trade with the nations of the world. Their foreign policies before the World War were of their own making. The war itself was of their own making. Their foreign policies after the war as well as their domestic policies were of their own making. They borrowed money from us fully conscious of the nature of the obligation. Yet now we are asked to take on our shoulders the entire burden of their mistakes by assuming the indebtedness they contracted.

For us to do so would make it possible for them to manufacture goods for export more cheaply than we could, since we would have to absorb the costs of production, of which the debt would be a large part. That fact would handicap us in selling to nations not our debtors as well as to those who owe us.

Other nations, whether they owe us or not, will sell us just so much of their products under our prices as we allow to enter this country, since people of all nations will buy the cheapest goods. Hence the only common-sense course for us to pursue is to erect a tariff wall to equalize costs between the products of our country and those of other countries.

It is undoubtedly a fact that 50,000,000 people in the United States would buy more of our home products than all of the 1,000,000,000 people in other parts of the world now or ever did buy from us. These 50,000,000 are now living from hand-to-mouth. It would be nearer the truth to say 90,000,000 people in the United States constitute the largest immediate market in the world for our products, a market where we could sell each year, not "$5,000,000,000 of exports," but $20,000,000,000 more at home than we ever sold in any one year. But to do this we must forget the foreign competitor in our planning to take care of the home market intelligently.

Our present unintelligent attitude is that of the dog who saw the shadow of the bone in his mouth, and dropped the bone to grab the shadow. GROVER W. AYERS.

Extra! Private Citizen Defends Senate Debate and Asks Papers Not to Be Impatient.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Permit a plain citizen to register a protest against the habit, nowadays so common, of making the United States Senate the butt of unceasing and indiscriminating criticism. In these trying times, when our nerves are on edge, when a succession of calamities sets us searching for scapegoats, it may be natural that the Senate, being the most conspicuous public body in the land, should be the shining target of abuse.

But it occurs to me that the gentlemen of the fourth estate, who know better than the average citizen what problems confront the Senate, and how necessarily intricate are the methods of legislation, should set an example to their readers of understanding and fairness. On the whole, the Senate is composed of able men devoted, according to their lights, to the welfare of the country.

Naturally so large a body of men can not arrive at agreement on laws and measures without much debate; and it is part of their function and duty to weigh and ponder the steps they take. It is unfair for the newspapers to abuse the Senate for not hurrying into unconsidered action; it is a perversion of leadership for the press to encourage the average citizen, who has no idea what laws he wishes passed, to abuse and ridicule the Senate for going about its law-making with care and deliberation. Let us help, not hamper.

Street Women a Nuisance in Certain Sections—Respectable Women Insulted.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It takes the tears in the street of a white slave victim to bring to the attention of the police how the city is becoming infested with women of this character. It has been more and more obvious in the past year, and has now become intolerable. I have noticed how these women flourish more and more in the down town streets. The women appear young, and ply their trade with great boldness. I am told they come from out of town, which indicates that they are in the hands of a vice ring.

It has become unsafe for respectable women to be out in the evening unescorted. They are under suspicion and are insulted, as I have witnessed. Washington has never been like this before. Something is seriously wrong somewhere. J. L.

WHAT IS ARMAMENT?

If every weapon were to be destroyed and every army disbanded the power would pass to the largest mob, according to the London Express, while the terror of the bullet and bomb would be replaced by the savagery of the bludgeon and the stone. Do armaments cause war? Does a common impotence, regardless of responsibilities, create peace among the nations?

Christian Science Churches

"Love" is the subject of the lesson-sermon in all the Churches of Christ, Scientist, tomorrow. The golden text is from I John iv:7: "Beloved, let us love one another; for love is of God, and every one that loveth is born of God and knoweth God." Among the citations which comprise the lesson-sermon is the following from the Bible: "The Lord hath appeared of old unto me, saying, Yea, I have loved thee with an everlasing love; therefore with loving kindness have I drawn thee." (Jeremiah iii:31.) The lesson-sermon also includes the following passage from the Christian Science text book, "Science and Health, With Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "The divine science taught in the original language of the Bible came through inspiration, and needs inspiration to be understood. Hence the misapprehension of the spiritual meaning of the Bible and the misinterpretation of the Word in some instances by uninspired writers, who only wrote down what an inspired teacher had said. A misplaced word changes the sense and misstates the science of the scriptures, as, for instance, to name love as merely an attribute of God; but we can by special and proper capitalization speak of the love of Love, meaning by that what the beloved disciple meant in one of his epistles when he said, 'God is love.'" (Page 319.)

Culbertson on Bridge

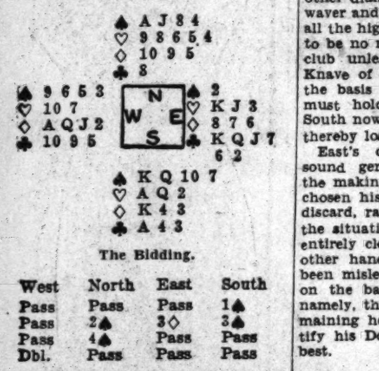
RETAINING A WORTHLESS CARD.

ONE of the most annoying partners and satisfactory opponents at the bridge table is the player who, when faced with the problems of discards, proceeds at once to discard all the cards he holds in a worthless suit, thereby making the defense of his partner, who probably holds strength in that suit, difficult, if not impossible, and affording to the declarer a clew as to the proper play of the hand or possibly a suggestion as to the correct end-play to assure the success of his contract. A hand dealt recently at Crockford's Club, New York's temple of bridge, disclosed how one player, through clever discarding, compelled the declarer to guess, and as a result of this player's brilliant defensive tactics the declarer guessed wrongly.

West—Dealer.
North-South vulnerable.



The Bidding.

West	North	East	South
Pass	Pass	Pass	1♠
Pass	2♠	3◇	3♠
Pass	4♠	Pass	Pass
Dbl.	Pass	Pass	Pass

The opening lead by West was the club 10. South won with the Ace and then ruffed a club in Dummy. Although he expected, on the face of West's Double, that he would find the heart King in West's hand, he still had to attempt the heart finesse. When this succeeded he ruffed another club. West played the 9 and thus South could place the remaining clubs—the King, Queen and Knave—in East's hand. East also held the heart King, and thus, in order to justify his Double, West must hold the Ace, Queen, Knave of diamonds or five of spades. South now led four rounds of trumps, carefully watching East's discards. The first round disclosed that West held only four spades. East discarded the diamond 7 and 6 and the club Knave. South then played the heart Ace, to which all followed. East thus must hold another diamond. South now began to waver and doubted whether West held all the high diamonds, as there seemed to be no reason for East to discard a club unless he held the Queen or Knave of diamonds, and decided on the basis of East's discards that he must hold an honor in that suit. South now led the diamond King and thereby lost his contract.

East's discards, while based on sound general principles, prevented the making of the contract. Had he chosen his last diamond as the final discard, rather than the club Knave, the situation would have been made entirely clear to the player. On the other hand, South should not have been misled, but should have played on the basis of his original plan—namely, that West must hold the remaining honors in diamonds to justify his Double, which was light, at best.

David Walsh to Demand Cut in Senate 'Expenses'

(Associated Press.)

Senator David I. Walsh (Democrat), Massachusetts, yesterday told newspapermen he intended to press at the next caucus of Senate Democrats a demand that "abuses" of senatorial privileges and "excessive expenditures" for senators be corrected.

As the Democrats soon will take over, he said, he will urge that they set up a special committee to review Senate expenditures item by item and recommend doing away with as many as possible.

What Today Means to You

"AQUARIUS."

IF January 28 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 6:30 a. m. to 8 a. m., from 11:30 a. m. to 12 noon and from 7 p. m. to 8:10 p. m. The danger periods are from 9 a. m. to 9:50 a. m. and from 3 p. m. to 4 p. m.

Little of a stimulating nature will be experienced on this January 28, in the business world. In the home, much benefit will be derived from the reading and study of good books and from meditating upon them. Social affairs and gatherings of an ostensibly gay and hilarious nature will in all probability prove not too delightful.

The child born on this January 28 will bring into his home a great deal of joy and happiness. The child's growth and development will be watched with much interest, and he will seem to live up to every expectation of his parents. Comparatively free from sickness during his early life, the child will carry on nicely through school, and should prove himself an outstanding student at college. Will marry young.

If January 28 is the date of your birth, you are a money maker from the very word go. You are constantly devising schemes and plans that will swell your coffers; you might almost be classed as "money-mad." In the course of your life you will probably make and lose several considerable fortunes; you will not leave any great wealth when you die. A winning personality, a ready and pleasing tongue, and the ability to sell yourself are your great assets. You are not a retiring person, but at the same time you can not be classed as a "pusher." You think and plan on a big scale, and you accomplish things on a big scale. Whether you go into the ministry, on the stage or into politics, whether you devote your life to a career as a lawyer, manufacturer or merchandizer, you will make yourself known as a power in that field.

Women born on January 28 invariably rise to high stations in the world, as teachers, welfare workers, in business or in some profession. Many of these women are wise in the selection of a mate and are found to be the capable wives of capable men. These women are quick to "spot" the possibilities of success in one of the opposite sex, and they are not unwilling as wives to aid these men in furthering their careers.

Successful people born on January 28:

Edward W. Morley, chemist.
Sir Henry M. Stanley, explorer.
Alexander Doyle, sculptor.
Daniel Willard, railroad president.
Pierre Lorillard, financier.

Interpreting the Mode

By DARE

FROM every age, from every corner of the known globe, does Dame Fashion take inspiration for the beautifying of Miladi. Looking at a male and a female peacock, one marvels that of human beings only, is the female the most ornate, the most decorated, and considered the most beautiful.

The last contention is open to dispute, but that Miladi is much more and more frequently adorned than Milord is indisputable. Even in the epoch when men, following the styles, so it is claimed, set by one Beau Brummel, adorned their persons with silks and gems, women were more extravagant than they. At times in the world's history, men and women have simultaneously adorned themselves with gems and fabrics, feathers and metals. But mostly it is woman who does this and man who most willingly procures for her the adornments.

In the Orient, men are more disposed to personal adornment than in the Occident. The Orient means the East, and is more correctly applied to the Far East than to China and her adjacent countries, even though things Asiatic are often called oriental. In far Caucasia, men not only adorn themselves and permit the women very little elegance in this respect, but sleep in the houses and allow their wives to sleep in the stable with the horses to this day—far from civilization, of course. But this is something extraordinary, and not to be construed as a frequent happening since the last thousand years!

The Orient has inspired many a frock and much jewelry for the adornment of Miladi Moderne. It is with genuine regret that I peruse a style magazine of Japan—and see tiny Japanese women smartly attired in the latest style of Occidental clothes—as chic as any Parisienne, if not as alluring as formerly. But the art of the Far East, as distinctive from Western art as day is from night, will never die, of that I am certain. Rather, it will progress and parallel the Western art, neither eclipsing the other. And this regardless of how universal styles in clothing may become.

By special and numerous requests, I have at last managed to make you a leaflet of Oriental designs, ten in all, each one different, and particularly adaptable in the same size to lampshades, boxes, furniture decoration, &c. Enlarged they would be lovely for sofa cushions, bedspreads, etc. And the enlarging gadget which you can buy at any art store will enlarge them for you without any trouble on your part. If then you would like to see ten Oriental Dah-ray designs for transferring, send a stamped, self-addressed envelope to the Dare Department of The Washington Post for this leaflet immediately.

This enlarging gadget is called a pentagraph, or a pantograph, or a pentanome; anyhow, it is a "penta" of some sort, which is Greek root of measure, or "panto" writing or line. And a simple thing to handle, if there ever was one!

Au revoir!

How to Be Beautiful

By ELSIE PIERCE

W E'RE being promoted to the intermediate class in exercise. Do it to music or in a group. Anything that will keep you interested. And don't start with a bang and then allow yourself to lag. Keep stepping.

The new dresses demand a flat, youthful line at waist and abdomen. The bending and trunk-twisting exercises published the other day are very good.

Here are two hard ones. They are really gymnastic, advanced exercises. You're very supple if you can do them. Lie on abdomen, legs stretched downward. Now support yourself on hands and toes and lift trunk part up and down, feeling the stretch at the abdomen.

Kneel on both knees, rest of body at right angles to lower limbs. Slowly sway backward and place arms stretched and tense behind you, palms on floor. Now attempt to come back to position, leading with thighs, not with buttocks. If it seems easy you are not doing the exercise right. Repeat a few times at first.

This one isn't very hard, but is good for both abdomen and waist. Lie on back. Bend right leg at knee and raise knee to chest. Repeat with left. Now both. Clasp hands at knees pull to chest and remain in this position for several minutes.

Another. In standing position, arms at sides, feet about 6 inches apart. Raise arms overhead, bend at waist and swing arms downward between legs.

Legs.

For the legs, the running in place exercise is fine. Kicking is good, too. Suspend a pillow in the doorway and so some tall kicking. Good for the back muscles, too.

Rope jumping is fine. And walking, upstairs and down and all around the town. Walk miles daily.

Stand near a table, touching it with fingertips for support. Swing the leg that is farthest from the table—forward, back as far as possible, knees taut. Repeat ten times. About face and swing other leg.

Bust.

All the arm flinging exercises are good for firming the bust. And this resistance exercise is especially beneficial. Standing position. Bend arms at elbow and raise to shoulder level. Double up fist of left hand and place in open palm of right hand at center of chest, shoulder high. Push arms to right while resisting as much as possible with right, until fists are directly in front of right shoulder. Relax. Repeat a few times. Back to position and reverse—to left.

Do not apply any local astringents to busts or massage unless so advised by your physician. Exercise is the only thing I recommend, as a rule.

For further information on reducing, please write me your individual problem and I shall be happy to help you.

How to Keep Well

By DR. W. A. EVANS

CERTIFIED MILK.

A NUMBER of years ago the physicians of Newark wanted a supply of milk that was clean enough to feed raw to babies. They knew the raw milk supply available to their youthful patients was very unclean, measured by the standards of a baby's needs. They considered the matter of sufficient importance to hold a meeting for discussion. Dr. Colt was given the task of finding a safe product.

He got hold of the largest and best milk producer on the market and, with him, worked out a method of producing a clean milk of standard quality, and of marketing it so as to bring it to the consumer when fresh.

The medical men formed a certifying commission to supervise the production and marketing. The names and other material were copyrighted. The commission entered into a contract, giving the producer the right to use the name "certified milk" and to advertise the supervisory control exercised over the production and marketing of the milk. They employed veterinarians to examine the milk cows, physicians to examine the milk handlers, sanitarians to examine the premises, and laboratories to examine the milk.

The other party to the contract, the producer, agreed to be regulated by the rules laid down to protect his milk against all exposure to diseases that it might transport, to keep it clean and cold, and to deliver it when fresh.

The commission was to receive no compensation except the fact that a safe, clean, and fresh supply of raw milk was to be made available to the community. While they employed the inspectors and other supervisors and paid them, the money needed was assessed against the producer on the basis of his supply.

This certified milk method, originated in Essex County, New Jersey, a third of a century ago, has since spread throughout the country. Nearly every city now has its supply of certified milk. When the movement began milk was frequently the means by which epidemics were spread. The users of certified milk were reasonably free from milk-spread diseases at a time when the general run of children were not. Now city milk is rarely responsible for epidemics, though smaller places with no supply of pasteurized milk or certified raw milk frequently suffer the consequences of their deficiencies. Health authoritis consider certified raw milk and pasteurized milk jointly as responsible for much of the freedom from contagious diseases and diarrheas which cities enjoy.

HARD TO CURE.

I. B. writes: Kindly write about ringworm of the toenails. Where the nails become thick and turn yellow, what could be used besides X-rays? I have had X-ray treatments, but it didn't cure.

REPLY.

Ringworm of the toenails is not easily cured, especially after the nails have become thick. One difficulty is in reaching the fungus. It is customary to soak the feet in warm water and soap, and then to apply a solution of lye to the nail to soften it; then scrape it down to about normal thickness. The nail is thus prepared for the remedies which are applied to kill the fungus. Curing such cases taxes the skill and patience of the patient and his physician.

Stocks Recover Declines As Rails Lead Late Rally

New York, Jan. 27 (A.P.).—Stocks had the rails to thank for an afternoon rally today. As a result of strong support for carrier issues, many losses of 1 to 2 points in other groups were canceled or reduced, and there was a sprinkling of small net gains by closing time.

Depression among tobacco shares, further sogginess of dairy issues, a break in Canadian Pacific and a miscellaneous assortment of other weak spots made the morning market discouraging, but the boom in rails, starting early in the afternoon, caused a retreat by the shorts. Although generally speaking, utilities and industrials did little more than recover their early declines, net improvement for many carriers ranged from 1 to 3 points. Turnover of 972,008 shares was the largest this week.

Wall street was inclined to ascribe strength of rail stocks, which have been fairly strong this week, to the better aspect of many December income statements and to authorization for an R. F. C. loan to help meet February 1 interest needs. Delaware & Hudson jumped 3 points on short covering, partly inspired by strength of New York Central. The latter, together with Santa Fe, Louisville & Nashville, New Haven, Union Pacific and Chesapeake & Ohio improved about a point.

American Telephone made up a 2-point loss. U. S. Steel common, American Can, Westinghouse, National Biscuit, North American, Woolworth and Du Pont gained fractions on the day. United Fruit rallied a point. American Tobacco "B," Liggett & Myers "B," Borden and U. S. Industrial Alcohol, on the other hand, lost 1 to 2 points. Dairy stocks have recently been effected by lower prices for their products. U. S. Steel preferred slid off a point, doubtless because the approach of its dividend meeting caused a recurrence of misgivings as to what will happed to the $1.75 payment. Paramount sold just under a dollar a share and was active. Loew's was heavy.

Canadian Pacific's drop was attributed variously to Premier Bennett's recent remarks on Canada's railroad problem and to the break-up of a European pool in the stock. The extreme decline of nearly 2 points was reduced to ¼ net.

Increases in the number of bank failures throughout the country may have offered a reason for early depression in the stock market, but this fresh wave of casualties to date has involved smaller institutions only. Wall street is exhibiting considerable interest in the move for a reduction in mortgage interest rates and learned that the Reconstruction Finance Corporation was considering extension of assistance to New York mortgage companies. Officials of several such concerns have already advocated a cut as a means of smoothing out the situation.

THE MARKETS AT A GLANCE

	Friday.	Thursday.
Advances	171	172
Declines	217	193
Unchanged	146	135
Total issues	534	500

Stocks.

Rails led the market in a late rally that wiped out prior losses and in some cases recorded slight gains. Sales totaled 972,008 shares, the largest turnover for the week. The boom in rails caused a retreat of shorts. The average loss was one-tenth of a point.

Bonds.

Semispeculative rail loans rallied near the close and sent bond averages up two-tenths of a point. The sales volume increased to $10,726,000.

Curb.

A feeble upturn in final trading failed to cover the morning losses. The market dropped. Sales advanced in volume to 110,000 shares. Swift International edged slightly higher.

Wheat.

Threats of war in the Far East enabled wheat to recover losses and record gains. Corn joined the rise. Oats remained firm and unchanged. May wheat sold at 47⅜ to 47¾ cents.

Cotton.

Trading was more active and prices were unchanged to 5 points higher. The range of fluctuations remained narrow. March sold at 6.13. Liverpool reported hedge selling taken by trade calling.

FOREIGN MARKETS.

London—The features of the trading on the stock exchange today were the advances to gilt-edged securities due to increased investment buying and the strength in gold mining shares. Buying came from South African and local sources on the estimated increase in profits. Transatlantic issues were easy, especially Canadian Pacific. The closing was irregular.

Paris—Only a small business was transacted on the bourse pending the outcome of the chambers' budgetary debate. Canadian Pacific shares were noticeably weak. The closing was heavy.

Berlin—Trading on the boerse was inactive and prices fluctuated narrowly. The market closed irregular.

FLOUR MARKETS.

New York, Jan. 27 (A.P.).—FLOUR—Easier; spring patents, 3.55@3.60; soft winter straights, 2.90@3.15; hard winter straights, 3.25@3.35.

BRAN—8.50@9.00.

GOODS MARKETS.

New York, Jan. 27 (A.P.).—Cotton goods were steady in light trading today. Rayons were in fair demand in some weave types. Retailers were taking better quantities of silks. Woolens were quiet. Burlaps were steady.

BOND PRICES GAIN UNDER RAILS' LEAD

Two-Tenths Gain Recorded as Sales Mount to $10,726,000.

New York, Jan. 27 (A.P.).—A last-minute rally in the semispeculative rail list helped the bond market to hold up its head today, although a number of obvious soft spots precluded the display of any unusual enthusiasm.

Trading volume picked up a little, sales totaling $10,726,000, par value. The average for 60 domestic corporate loans also edged up two-tenths of a point.

After mulling about uneasily, most of the session, recoveries of a point or more were recorded by some loans of Alleghany Corporation, Baltimore & Ohio, Chesapeake Corporation, St. Paul, Denver & Rio Grande, Erie, Great Northern, Illinois Central, Kansas City Southern, Lehigh Valley, Missouri Pacific, New York Central, Frisco, Southern Pacific, and Texas & Pacific. Northern Pacific issues were heavy and there were a number of minor rail losses.

Weakness of motion picture corporation loans, reflecting the equity receivership yesterday of the Paramount-Publix Corporation, gave the industrials a spotty appearance. Declines in this section included Keith Corporation 6s, off 1; Loew's 6s, off 2⅝; Paramount-Publix 5½s, off ⅝ to a record low of 7½; RKO 6s, off ½, and Warner Bros. 6s, off 1. United States Rubber 5s were the heaviest traded of the session, at a loss of 1⅝ points. At the same time, gains were held by bonds of Chile Copper, White Sewing Machine, Certain-teed Products, International Paper, Dodge Bros. and Lehigh Valley Coal. Several of the secondary utilities advanced fractionally to a point.

United States Government securities were moderately mixed and foreign bonds were dull and irregular. Some of the Germans reacted around a point. French 7s firmed and Japanese issues eased.

71 Manufacturing Plants Net 0.6 Per Cent on Investment

New York, Jan. 27 (A.P.).—The corporate income of manufacturing industry averaged about 0.6 per cent on its investment in 1932, Prof. Ralph A. Epstein, of the University of Buffalo, estimates in a study made under the supervision of the National Bureau of Economic Research.

This is based on estimates and data for 71 corporations with an aggregate investment of about $6,500,000,000. The information was derived from an investigation sponsored by the committee on recent economic changes, with supplementary data from Standard Statistics Co.

"In the depression year 1921," said Prof. Epstein's report, "the return on capital (for the 71 corporations) was 3.8 per cent. Ten years later, in 1931, it was almost exactly the same (3.6 per cent). The 1932 preliminary figure, however, falls almost to zero, or 0.6 per cent."

Prof. Epstein explained, however, that the 0.6 per cent for 1932 was only a preliminary estimate. It was obtained in part by making a rough estimate for one large company, which, on the basis of available material, Prof. Epstein estimated had a deficit of about $82,500,000. Without this company the return for the 70 companies was 2.2 per cent. Prof. Epstein pointed out that if the estimated deficit of the company proves too large the 1932 return figure will be somewhat above 0.6 per cent, but undoubtedly less than 2 per cent.

"In absolute terms the net income of these 71 companies," he said, "was $837,000,000 in 1929. It declined by 36 per cent in 1930. A further drop of 59 per cent in 1931 brought it to $220,000,000. For 1932 preliminary data indicate that the third successive decline probably will reduce it to something less than $60,000,000, a shrinkage of 70 per cent or more from the level of 1931 and of over 90 per cent from that of 1929."

The preliminary data indicate that 38 of 71 companies had deficits in 1932, compared to 31 in 1931, 19 in 1930, and only 6 in 1929.

Here is the percentage return on investment of various groups represented in the 71 companies as estimated for 1932, compared with 1929:

Foods (eleven companies), 8.3 per cent, as reduced from 10.5 per cent in 1929.

Textiles (fifteen companies), minus 2.5 per cent, as reduced from 7.3.

Chemicals (ten companies), 4 per cent, from 11.6.

Paper, printing (six companies), 5.2 per cent, from 25.4.

Stone, lumber (eight companies), minus 4.3 per cent, from 7.9.

Leather, rubber (six companies), minus 1.9 per cent, from 4.9.

Special manufacturing (six companies), 3.9 per cent, from 11.8.

Pound Sinks Again As Franc Climbs

Canadian Dollar Also Joins Losses; Drop Is Unexplained.

New York, Jan. 27 (A.P.).—The British pound sterling and Canadian dollar were rather heavy today in the foreign exchange market while European gold currencies rallied moderately.

The pound was in a declining mood most of the day and there were reports that the Bank of England control was a seller at one time. The currency ended with a net loss of 1 cent at a cable rate of $3.37⅜. The Dominion exchange, at the same time, lost 9-16 of a cent at 85.87½ cents. There were no especial reasons advanced for the Canadian recession, the dollar having recently followed an easy range.

Fractional gains were held by French francs, Belgian belgas, Dutch guilders and Swiss francs. On the other hand, minor losses were suffered by Italian lire, German marks, the Scandinavians, Japanese yen and Mexican pesos.

Hop Prices Quiet.

New Firm Planned By Alleghany Gas

Details of Reorganization Being Submitted to Stockholders.

New York, Jan. 27 (A.P.).—A reorganization plan for Alleghany Gas Corporation, which operates in Ohio and West Virginia, providing for formation of a new company to own or control substantially all assets of the present company, is being submitted to holders of the corporation's first mortgage and collateral bonds, it was announced today.

Holders of each $1,000 of 6½ per cent collateral bond, on which interest was defaulted May 1, would receive $500 general lien 6 per cent income bonds of the new company, and in addition, voting trust certificates representing 50 shares of common stock.

Holders of 7 per cent notes would get trust certificates for ten shares of new common for each $1,000 note; and preferred and common stock holders would receive rights to buy new common stock.

Rubber Closed Dull.

New York, Jan 27 (A.P.).—Crude rubber futures closed dull. March, 3.00; May, 3.05, bid; July, 3.12, bid; September, 3.18, bid. Smoked ribbed spot closed, 2.96, nominal.

CURB'S FINAL RISES FAIL TO COVER LOSS

Swift International Higher as Sales Increase to 110,000 Shares.

New York, Jan. 27 (A.P.).—Curb prices showed a feeble rally in the last hour today, but failed to catch up with the earlier losses in most of the leaders. Trading involved 110,000 shares, against 80,000 yesterday.

It was a drooping market during most of the session, with some issues reaching new January lows. Electric Bond & Share sold below 18, but narrowed its loss to a small fraction at the close. The turnover in this utility leader approximated 10 per cent of the total volume.

Various utility preferred stocks were easily depressed by light offerings and losses of 1 to 3 points were sustained by Alabama Power, Cities Service, Georgia Power, Pennsylvania Water and Central States Electric preferred issues. New York Power & Light preferred made a better showing with a gain of 2 points.

Swift International edged slightly higher, but most of the other food stocks, including Swift & Co. and Libby-McNeil, were washed back a little under moderate selling.

The mining and oil groups were irregular and featureless. Lake Shore Mines held closely to its recent high, but Mohawk Mining, a Michigan copper producer, dropped about 2 points. Standard Oil of Indiana was the most active of its group and recorded a minor gain.

Receivers Appointed For Saenger Theaters

New Orleans, Jan. 27 (A.P.).—Saenger Theaters, Inc., operating motion picture theaters in Louisiana, Mississippi, Alabama, Florida and Cuba, was placed in receivership today in the Federal District Court. Judge Wayne G. Borah named Ernest V. Richards, a Saenger executive, receiver under bond of $25,000.

Action was taken on a petition of the Publix Theaters of New York on a claim that Saenger Theaters, Inc., owed the New York concern $6,000. Besides a debt of $1,550,000 secured by mortgages on its property, the Saenger corporation was reported in the petition to owe approximately $300,000 to various other creditors.

Liberty National Bank Reelects All Officers

Directors of Liberty National Bank held their annual meeting of organization yesterday and reelected all officers of that institution. They are the following: Rolfe E. Boiling, president; M. F. Calnan, vice president and cashier; J. B. Skinner, J. H. O'Neale, C. C. Cranford, assistant cashiers; T. P. Littlepage, general counsel and trust officer; W. V. Simmons, assistant trust officer.

Canada's Curb on Gold Export Holds for Year

Ottawa, Ont., Jan. 27 (A.P.).—Prohibition of the export of gold, either in coin or bullion, except under a license by the minister of finance, will continue until December 31 this year, unless sooner rescinded by order-in-council, the minister of national revenue announced today.

By order-in-council last May, the export of gold from Canada was prohibited, with the qualification that the license from the finance minister was necessary to permit any such exportation. The period within which this restriction was operative expired on December 31 last.

The order-in-council published today now extends that period for another year.

WHEAT VALUES PUSH UP ON WAR THREATS

Russian-Japanese Friction Aids Market; Corn Gains; Oats Firm.

Chicago, Jan. 27 (A.P.).—Rumored war threats in the Far East between Russia and Japan perked wheat prices upward fast late today, and temporarily more than offset earlier declines.

The rumors of Russian-Japanese friction were decidedly indefinite, except that they related to Japanese aviation plans. Previous sellers of wheat who attempted to reverse their market position found offerings had suddenly become scarce, and that little wheat was obtainable until quotations jumped in some cases to above yesterday's finish.

Wheat closed nervous, unchanged to ⅝ lower; corn unchanged to ⅛ advance; oats unchanged, and provisions unchanged to 5 cents down.

Condition of Market.

Preceding the late rally in wheat prices, the market here showed a general downward trend, and reached the lowest point since Monday, 1½ cents under yesterday's best price. Moderate liquidating sales attributed to Eastern holders of wheat acted as a weight on values, and there was unsettlement also because of "spread" transactions between Chicago and Winnipeg and between Chicago and Kansas City. Something of a check on wheat price downturns, however, was uneasiness regarding domestic winter crop prospects not only southwest but elsewhere should a sudden drop in temperature take place.

One of the principal unofficial crop authorities said that owing to the weather wheat had taken on winter growth in many parts of the domestic belt, and that although this was a good feature where plants had sufficient moisture, the effect, nevertheless, was to cause danger in case of quick, severe cold. Traders gave attention also to the fact that arrivals of wheat at domestic primary centers were but little more than half the totals a year ago. In addition to the late stimulus from war rumors, corn market strength gave aid to wheat.

Corn and oats firmness was associated with a rise on hog quotations to the best level in two months, putting corn on a more profitable feeding basis.

Provisions were easy, owing to liquidating sales of lard by holders of January contracts.

NEW YORK.

Raw sugar was quiet early today and in absence of transactions spot prices were unchanged at 2.69. It is reported that a fair quantity of the Hawaiian sugar, where the crop is said to be moving earlier than usual, has been sold here at a price to be fixed on the day of arrival, although no details were obtainable.

Futures opened unchanged to 1 point higher on scattered covering and commission house buying promoted by the steadiness of the spot market. The demand was supplied by selling through trade and producing interests, and the partial upturn, which occurred only in September and January, was lost later. The market at midday was not unchanged on all positions.

Refined was unchanged at 3.90 for fine granulated.

TRADING IN COTTON LIGHT DURING WEEK

New York, Jan. 27 (A.P.)—A disposition to await the further development of legislative uncertainties in Washington, or a better line of acreage and general trade prospects, has been reflected by the comparatively small business in cotton here during the past week, according to local brokers.

Further near-month liquidation incident to the evening-up of January contracts and the nearer approach of March maturity, has been quite readily taken at the prevailing differences.

Selling otherwise has been limited to a moderate volume of offerings from the South and little spurts of realizing or scattering liquidation. This has been absorbed by a continued demand from the trade while some commission house buying was reported and some observers think they have seen a little investment buying on declines or scale-down orders.

Prices Move Narrowly.

These operations have been reflected by some irregularity in fluctuations, but prices have held within a comparatively narrow range with the market showing a fairly steady undertone.

The report of the Census Bureau showing 12,418,310 bales of cotton ginned prior to January 16 was about in line with expectations and without apparent effect on the market although some traders regarded the figures as pointing to a total outturn slightly in excess of the December estimate.

Some attention has also been attracted by the falling off in exports as compared with last year, but on the whole statistical features have come in for very little discussion. Toward the end of the week there were reports of slightly increased spot offerings in the Southwest and a little more Southern selling was reported here.

Rumors of Easing.

Offerings from such sources were not heavy enough to make much impression on the market however and rumors of an easing basis on some of the less desirable grades have not been definitely confirmed.

Coming crop preparations are said to have been delayed by wet soil, but the rains of this winter are supposed to be putting a good season in the ground, and January delays in farmwork may prove of comparatively little importance.

Advices received here from the South have indicated a disposition to increase acreage in some sections, but the question of acreage is supposed to be more or less complicated by pending legislation, and the situation has not yet developed sufficiently to bring about any crystallization of sentiment.

Receivers Try to Take Over Paramount-Publix

Newark, N. J., Jan. 27 (A.P.)—Application for receivers to take charge of the New Jersey assets of the Paramount Publix Corporation was made today before Federal Judge Guy L. Fake. The court set next Wednesday for a hearing.

The application was made by William Harris, counsel for William Boal, holder of a $1,000 sinking fund gold note. The Paramount Publix New Jersey properties are in Asbury Park, Long Branch and Plainsfield. The action in Judge Fake's court came after Federal Judge William Clark had declined to act on the application. Yesterday in New York Charles Hilles and Adolph Zukor were appointed equity and bankruptcy receivers for the corporation.

Representatives of the four volunteer fire companies of Alexandria met last night in the Potomac Community Hall and formed the Alexandria Fireman's Association. Richard A. Roseberry was elected temporary chairman, and Samuel A. DeVaughan temporary secretary, but the election of permanent officers was deferred until the next meeting, in the engine house of Engine Company No. 1, February 28.

The purposes of the association were detailed by Mr. Roseberry and Mr. DeVaughan, and short talks were given by T. Frank Allwine, president of the Arlington-Fairfax Relief Association; James M. Duncan jr., chief of the Alexandria Fire Department; Thomas W. It was set forth that the object of the association is to promote cooperation between the various companies, and the elimination of other than friendly rivalry, which the speakers believe will tend to increase the efficiency of the entire force.

"RASPUTIN AND THE EMPRESS." Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picturization of a story by Charles MacArthur, with musical score by Herbert Stothart, starring Ethel, Lionel and John Barrymore, with Diana Wynyard, Ralph Morgan, Tad Alexander, C. Henry Gordon and Edward Arnold. Directed by Richard Boleslavsky. Reviewed Friday night.

By NELSON B. BELL.

True, in the main, to historical fact, regal in its material investiture and the sustained atmosphere of imperial grandeur and superbly acted by the three Barrymores, this sumptuously spectacular drama measures up in impressiveness to the epochal events with which it deals.

"Rasputin and the Empress" is more than any mere domestic intrigue, involving a monumental impostor and a queenly mother wrapped up in the welfare of her small and ailing son. It is the drama of a dynasty unthroned; the story of a social upheaval that altered the course of world events and presaged a national destiny that has not even yet definitely revealed itself.

The same subject matter, to be sure, has been put to similar uses numerous times before, but never with such consummate artistry as is here disclosed—artistry of Ethel, Lionel and John Barrymore; artistry of Richard Boleslavsky, the director; artistry of William Daniels, the photographer, and no less of Charles MacArthur, who contrived the new ends to which familiar material might be put, and Herbert Stothart, who composed an illuminating and impressive musical score to accentuate the high points of the action.

There is much in the development of the climacteric moments of the play that is genuinely and unforgettably harrowing. There is much in the gentler passages that is memorably beautiful. And there is throughout its length an integrity that leaves an enduring impression.

Mr. MacArthur has been judicious in his distribution of opportunities among the trio of stars. Ethel Barrymore, as the Empress, who, through her blind faith in Gregory Rasputin, the slovenly charlatan who exercised a hypnotic power over the members of her household and court, made possible the overthrow of the Romanoffs, is a sympathetic and pitiful figure—yet not so pitiful as Czar Nickie, the Little Father of all the Russias, vacillating, indecisive and of moral weakling, despite a passionate devotion to his country and its people. Ralph Morgan portrays this role with understanding skill.

If any profits by extended presence upon the scene, it is Lionel Barrymore in the role of Rasputin. This shrewd mountebank, of peasant origin and animal instincts, uncouth, lascivious and degraded, he makes a thoroughly obnoxious renegade "churchman," whose death is contrived in a manner at slight variance with supposed fact, its only authentic quality being the "mad monk's" tenacity of life. The death scene in which John Barrymore, in the heroic role of a fictitious Prince Paul Chegodieff, who has been added to history, slays Rasputin by a gruesome bludgeoning and then drowning, is one of the most realistic episodes ever recorded in celluloid.

John Barrymore, by a sudden reclamation of all those qualities of greatness that marked the last of his stage appearances, contributes the soundest character drawing he has done for the screen to the completion of a triumvirate of flawless performances. The expected Barrymore mannerisms here are all abandoned in favor of sincere, believable and wholly convincing characterization and acting.

The record of fine achievement, however, is not restricted to the "royal family." Diana Wynyard, as the Princess Natasha; Master Tad Alexander, who does a remarkably precocious piece of work as the Czarevitch; C. Henry Gordon and Edward Arnold, all give excellent accounts of themselves in roles of importance. Then in the minor parts are such established artists as Mary Alden, William Boyd, Lucien Littlefield, Frank Reicher, Gustav von Seyffertitz and scores more.

So complete is "Rasputin and the Empress" in every element of commanding drama—and this in spite of introductory scenes that do not lend the action any considerable early momentum—that no supplementary features of any description are offered.

A large and distinguished audience at last night's premiere gave every evidence of being deeply moved by a tragic recital of profound impressiveness and truly epic sweep.

"THE KID FROM SPAIN." United Artists picturization of a story by William Anthony McGuire, Bert Kalmar and Harry Ruby, starring Eddie Cantor, supported by Lyda Roberti, Robert Young and Ruth Hall. Directed by Leo McCarey. Reviewed Friday evening by W. A. Whitney.

Eddie Cantor . . . Lyda Roberti . . . Robert Young . . . Ruth Hall . . . John Miljan . . . Noah Beery . . . Sidney Franklin . . . Robert Emmett O'Connor . . . ultramodern coed dormitory . . . oodles and oodles of pulchritudinous damsels . . . practical joking . . . expulsions . . . bank robbers . . . Mexico . . . mistaken identity, deliberately perpetrated . . . angry jilted suitor . . . bandits . . . dances . . . songs . . . bull fights . . . finally, love triumphant—put them all together and they make "The Kid From Spain!"

And if it all doesn't yield any sense—well, that's all right, too. What do you expect for your money, anyway, when Eddie Cantor starts cutting up? That's just what you get, and you get it as you have never got it in any of the earlier Cantor releases.

Here is a complete musical comedy (accent on the latter half), conceived and staged in a most scintillating manner, setting off the inimitable buffoonery of Mr. Cantor, in the title role, more than admirably, with just enough songs and dances interspersed in the rapid-fire series of Cantorian gags to give the audience a chance to regain, partially, at least, some degree of normalcy.

In this, as with his other operas, Mr. Cantor's songs are an important adjunct to the entertainment, but here they are not so absolutely necessary as in some of his other pictures, for the McGuire-Kalmar-Ruby combine has contrived to write a comedy, brilliantly studded with an apparently interminable series of wisecracks and rib-tickling gags put over by Mr. Cantor as no one else can do it; a comedy which, without benefit of songs and music, would prove one of the season's most diverting pictures. With these songs—"In the Moonlight," a burlesqued version of "La Paloma," "Look What You've Done," and "No Wonder We're in Love"—and sung at and with Lyda Roberti. (If you have never seen a platinum blonde senorita, here is your chance) as the foil, "The Kid From Spain," takes on added interest and zest.

Of course, there is nothing of any great sense to this entire work, but if the "doctor" has prescribed a good, hearty, laugh, then here is the swellest chance you have had for a long time to get it.

There is no need of expatiating at great length on the merits of Mr. Cantor's performance, nor, for that matter, those of any of the others mentioned in the first small-type paragraph of this. A great all 'round performance, not only by the acting company, but by the authors, the composers, the dance director and every one connected with its production.

Packing more comedy onto the aching back of the auditor, "Free Wheeling," an Our Gang release, concerns an inebriated donkey and a run-away "taxi." A release of the Hearst Metrotone News completed the reviewed performance, although a travelogue, "Leningrad," is billed as a further supplementary attraction.

EARLE

"HARD TO HANDLE." Warner Brothers picturization of a story by Houston Branch, adapted to the screen by Wilson Mizner and Robert Lord, starring James Cagney, with Mary Brian, Ruth Donnelly, Claire Dodd, Gavin Gordon, Emma Dunn and Robert McWade. Directed by Mervyn Le Roy. Reviewed Friday afternoon.

Dropping into the same category as "The Half-Naked Truth" as a comic utilization of the more or less honest art of publicity promoting, this breezy study of a young man at grips with a long run of tough luck offers an oddly diverting combination of legitimate run and slapstick clowning.

"Lefty" Merrill is first discovered as the ballyhoo man for a marathon dance that has mopped up in a big way. Envisioning a future of big-time opportunities and comparable emoluments, he is about to award the grand prize of $1,000 to the girl he loves, when his partner in the venture takes a run-out powder with all the dough. Mr. Merrill's life from that point on becomes one continuous sprint ahead of the law and the victims of his imaginative enterprises.

But in course of time, and after a transcontinental hike from southern California to New York, where he again contacts his gal and her gaudy and gabby ma, "Lefty" gets in the money. From grapefruit to eighteen-day diets, his promotions sweep the country. Master Merrill sits on top of the world. Then the law again, a troublesome dame and the wooing business all over, to you know what kind of a finish!

This sort of thing, as you can plainly see, is as snugly fitted to the Cagney talents as it is to Lee Tracy's. Mr. Cagney plays it with equal zest, a few socks on the nose and a great deal of running up and down stairs. Much of the time he is exciting, dynamic and amusing. Some of the time he seems just a little silly and a trifle bogged down by what the director probably insisted upon his doing.

However, it is Ruth Donnelly as Old "Lil" Waters, Ruth Waters' high-strung mama, who really gets herself stuck in the slapstick! She plays the part the way Winnie Lightner would if Winnie ever got as completely off her nut as Ruth—if you get the idea. Mary Brian, as the more youthful of the Waterses, is a thoroughly likable youngster, as she always is. The rest do not so much matter, although Claire Dodd is difficult to overlook as the "other girl" in Mr. Cagney's love life.

This is nothing to be taken seriously, this "Hard to Handle." That is, unless you really wish to make it hard to handle. For those who can drift along amiably with a great deal of utter nonsense and occasional flashes of genuine humor, it will prove quite what the doctor ordered. Yesterday afternoon's crowd ate it up, grapefruit and all.

On the stage, Miss Maxine Doyle, all done up in the last word in frocks, introduced a group of vaudeville specialists no one of whom failed to click. Helen Kane, returning after a considerable absence from the local boards, headlines the bill and still is secure in the doubtful distinction of being the world's greatest boop-boop-a-doop singer. Offering some old songs and some new, she scored emphatically, with the aid of Joe Keden at the piano.

Running second to none in audience favor, the Three Radio Rogues, Jimmy Hollywood, Ed Bartell and Henry Taylor, knock the customers right out into the aisles with their cleverly staged and lighted broadcast burlesque, during which they give amazingly accurate travesties of the work of the most famous of the radio stars. In a class by itself, this one.

Fred Reynolds and Allie White have a musical interval that is grotesque in conception and execution but surprising in its final moment. DeWolfe, Metcalf and Ford, dance stylists, have a novel little dancing act, called "What, No Rhumba?" that discloses some neat acrobatic work.

The Universal News, with Graham McNamee; a Looney Tune cartoon comedy, "Bosko in Dutch," and the orchestral prelude complete a carefree and utterly irresponsible hour or two of fast, if not always furious, tomfoolery. N. B. B.

METROPOLITAN

"PARACHUTE JUMPER." Warner-Vitaphone picturization based on the original story by Rian James, featuring Douglas Fairbanks, jr., Bette Davis, Frank McHugh and Leo Carrillo, with Claire Dodd, Sheila Terry, Harold Huber, &c. Directed by Alfred E. Green. Reviewed Friday night by M. A. McKavitt.

"Parachute Jumper" is a sharp, but highly pleasing salade du theatre. Here's the recipe for this latest Hollywood concoction: Take a pinch of hunger, a piquant piece of femininity, two salty Marines, a goodly portion of Circean pulchritude, add bright dialogue and carefully watch the temperature. Serve with plenty of action, a suave narcotic-ring master, a United States border air patrol, a sprinkling of gunfire and a few thrills watching several airships crack up. We think you'll like it!

The formula offered above sounds like a potpourri. It is just that. However, we prescribe it as a good substitute for that bridge game or a dull and loquacious boy friend. There is nothing displeasing here. It doesn't contain the elements necessary to cause deep emotional excitement, it is not so hilariously funny that your vest buttons will be in danger of popping off, nor is it replete with that grand concatenation of super thrills peculiar to some products of moviedom. Yet it is worthwhile entertainment.

Young Fairbanks is more favorably cast than he was in his Russian opus seen a short while ago. Bette Davis is improving by leaps and bounds. This team of young American thespians work naturally and with an ease which will appeal to their vast public.

The plot of "Parachute Jumper" pertains to the fortunes of three young but very brave people—a saucy little Southern gal and two ex-Marines—who, while seeking work in the big city, pool their earthly goods and efforts and find adventure and thrills in the pursuit of cash for board and room. Frank McHugh is the other ex-Marine. You've guessed who was his pal. Although Frank's personality and lines do not create any extravagant amount of laughter, still he is a very personable Frank McHugh. Leo Carrillo has brought to the screen a highly respectable portrayal of a racketeer leader that is different and fascinating.

The minor roles are played by capable actors. There is a short story atmosphere about the movie that makes it decidedly modern.

La Dressler and Mlle. Moran cavort in their usual robust manner in a two-reeler of early vintage called "Dangerous Females." The Paramount News was the finishing touch to the evening's relaxation.

RKO-KEITH'S

"THE BIG DRIVE." First Division presents Albert L. Rule's nine-reel symposium of the official war films of eight combatant nations in the World War, representing both the Allies and the Central Powers, with a descriptive narrative by Mr. Rule, former sergeant major, A. E. F. Reviewed from Tuesday midnight preview.

The filth, the travail and the unspeakable agony of the great war are brought back in all their vivid horror in this chronological presentation of the salient events in the most destructive armed conflict in the history of civilization.

Beginning with the first invasion of Belgium by the gray-clad hosts from across the Rhine and depicting comprehensive scenes of front-line and behind-the-line activities on all of the battle areas' frontiers up to the very moment of the armistice, "The Big Drive" affords the most searching analysis of modern warfare that has found its way to the screen. Not a phase of armed conflict but seems to be represented in this carefully assembled and apparently authentic recital of the grim realities of systematized murder and property destruction.

Never before within the memory of this observer have war's barbarities been so mercilessly driven home as here—fields churned by shell fire, thickly scattered with the mutilated bodies of the wounded and dead; towns and cities battered into shapeless heaps of rubbish; abandoned trenches clogged with the gruesome remnants of enfiladed troops; dressing stations, reeking with mud, blood and refuse; emergency operations performed before your very eyes; hand-to-hand struggles to the death—although here, as has been intimated in other columns, is the only aspect of the picture that arouses a bit of incredulity—the war's toll in animal as well as human life, strewn about the fields of carnage—all these and more are laid bare to the spectator in frank and terrifying close-up.

"The Big Drive," however, does not confine itself to the sanguinary aspects of war. It provides, in addition, intimate studies of the great of all nations involved in the struggle, the tedious marching of troops to and from the front, transport, the colossal engineering feats that encompassed railroad, dock and bridge building; artillery fire, the tank corps in action, naval action, aviation, including antiaircraft fire and the bringing down of a giant dirigible at night; civilian life; the maneuvers in Russia, Africa, Mesopotamia—what not.

Stress, of course, is laid upon America's entry into the war and the major campaigns in which the doughboys and devildogs participated to their own and their country's glory—Chateau Thierry, the Argonne, St. Mihiel.

Throughout the unreeling of the film the voice of Sergt. Maj. Rule is heard in running comment upon the scenes that disclose themselves upon the screen. His talk is peppered with grammatical and lingual crudities, but, nevertheless, rather gets to the pith of the thing and explodes many of the war period's pet misapprehensions, among them the seeming fable of German atrocities in Belgium.

The photography, necessarily, is that of a decade and a half ago, much of it faded, scratched and mottled with time's erosions, but there can be no gainsaying the historical significance and value of the events it so realistically reflects.

The bill is augmented by a clever organlogue and song reel, "Around the World;" an Aesop Fable cartoon, "Opening Night," which might be aimed at Radio City, and a new issue of the Pathe News. N. B. B.

LOEW'S FOX

"SON-DAUGHTER." Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's picturization of the David Belasco-George Scarborough play, adapted to the screen by John Goodrich and Claudine West, starring Helen Hayes and Ramon Novarro, supported by Lewis Stone, Warner Oland, Ralph Morgan, Louise Closser Hale and H. B. Warner. Directed by Clarence Brown. Reviewed Friday night by Dorothea Lewis.

A lovely, lovely thing this "Son-Daughter," as near perfection in art as the movies have yet approached. It is a picture which has in it all the material and mechanics for melodrama, but never becomes melodramatic, and a picture that is beautifully complete in acting, direction, photography and dialogue.

The whole atmosphere of the Orient, its mysticism and beauty, poetry and flaming knife-in-the-back hatred is made absolutely real, yet strange enough for fascination, far out-distancing "Shanghai Express," "Madame Butterfly" and "Bitter Tea of General Yen," probably because here the Orient is left to the Oriental, without whites messing about and into its life, even though that life is lived in an American Chinatown.

In San Francisco's Chinatown, so calm on the surface, so torn and tortured inwardly by Mother China's civil strife, lives Lien Wha and loves Mr. Tom Lee. But Lien Wha's father is a patriot, and Tom Lee is a prince, and instead of marrying him, Lien Wha must work with them for China. Being a mere daughter, her only way to aid is to marry the highest bidder and use the marriage money for her country.

Our only complaint is the anticlimactic last scene aboard the munition ship. The picture actually ends with Lien Wha's vengeance cry to her god and it should be allowed to end there.

The cast is something to delight in—not one slanting eyebrow of which should be quirked more suddenly or subtly.

Helen Hayes—but what is there left to say of her save that as Lien Wha, even looking less Chinese than any one else? She is Lien Wha, coy and fiery, commanding and obedient, a brave little, tragic little, son-daughter, particularly magnificent in the betrothal bidding scene, a person to weep over and smile with, to love and to thrill at in that last scene as we haven't thrilled since her second act in "Coquette" years ago.

And Ramon Novarro, the artist who has had so few chances to be artistic and all that his talents might let him be, at last has found a role to which he is ideally suited and to which he brings more grace, delicacy and sincerity than any one else might. Handsome for all his shaven head and splendid make-up, he does equally well with his opportunities for comedy and tragedy.

H. B. Warner is a regal Chinese patriot; Lewis Stone, a most sympathetic father of his son-daughter, Louise Closser Hale, the darling, with an amazingly accurate make-up is excellent as Toy Yah, and Warner Oland, the eternal Oriental from Sweden, and Ralph Morgan are blandly sinister.

The stage portion of the bill doesn't matter very much, though it is better than the average, featuring the Three St. John Brothers in a startling acrobatic exhibition; Lowe, Burnoff and Wensley showing how adagio and ballroom dancers must feel after too much dancing, and Anatole Friedland's handsomely staged revue with some good dancers and potential stars—our pick being the lady from the box who has a very nice sense of comedy.

Georgie Price's imitations are, of course, right and remarkable, but, oh, Georgie, why the opening patter? Jack Pillard and Al Hillier also are on the program.

Watson Beats Labarba in Upset

Flustered a bit at the start, apparently still unsettled by the widely ballyhooed "trial by fistic jury" he was forced to undergo before the New York State Athletic Commission would accept his fighting status, Watson weathered two early knockdowns and came back to outfight the curly-headed Californian by a wide margin.

Jolts Startled Briton In First Round.

Once he had felt the canvas under him, Watson, a spindly legged veteran of the king's navy, came back with a vengeance. His pawing left beat a tattoo on Labarba's face and he consistently had the better of Fidel in the fierce fighting at close quarters.

Crowd of 12,000 Cheers Briton.

Once the crowd of 12,000 realized that Watson was anything but the very ordinary warrior he seemed when three preliminary boys punched him around in the public "trial by jury," they cheered him on and booed Labarba's constant holding and wrestling.

The farther the struggle went, the better Watson got. A counter-fighter, he jabbed fiercely with his left and swarmed all over Labarba at close quarters, meeting him with right uppercuts and two-fisted barrages that had Fidel gasping for breath.

The Associated Press score card gave Watson seven rounds, Labarba five. The decision of Referee Pete Hartley and the two judges was unanimous.

Schoolboys Struggle for Ball

Warner and Ingram Back Plan to Liberalize Passing

CHICAGO, Jan. 27 (A.P.).—Coach Dick Hanley, of Northwestern, arrived home today with the information that Coaches Glenn ("Pop") Warner, of Temple, and "Navy Bill" Ingram, of California, were behind his plan to liberalize the forward pass in football.

Warner, Ingram and Fred Swan, Wisconsin line coach, accompanied Hanley on the trip from California, where he has been since he was stricken with influenza after the annual East-West game. Warner and Swan were en route East to look over the Temple situation, while Ingram was bound for a confab with Jesse Harper, of Notre Dame, in an effort to agree on a football date next fall.

"Both Coach Warner and Coach Ingram are in accord with the move to change the rules so that a pass can be made from any point back of the line of scrimmage instead of 5 yards back as the rules now provide," Coach Hanley said. "It will mean that football will become more open than ever before and will add as much pep to the sport as the lively ball did to baseball. Scores of four and five touchdowns are likely to be common because the proposed change of rules will permit more deception and make for more scoring."

Ingram admitted prospects weren't very bright for the Notre Dame-California game next season because of conflicting dates. Notre Dame wants December 16 while California offers either 9 or 23, explaining December 16 would come in the midst of examinations.

Australian Boy, 16, Victor Over Vines

Vivian McGrath, Hailed as Coming Great, Wins by 6-2, 2-6, 8-6, 7-5.

Melbourne, Australia, Jan. 27 (A.P.).—Vivian McGrath, the 16-year-old player who has been hailed as the coming great of Australian tennis, today defeated Ellsworth Vines, jr., American and Wimbledon champion, in the quarter-finals of the Australian lawn tennis championships. The scores were 6—2, 2—6, 8—6, 7—5.

McGrath has been playing brilliant tennis on the current invasion by the United States team, having defeated at least once every member of the visiting squad.

He will meet Keith Gledhill, Vines' doubles partner, in the semifinals.

Jack Crawford, Australia's number one, in the meantime was eliminating another American, Wilmer Allison, in a semifinal match, taking a hard-fought victory, 6—3, 3—6, 3—6, 6—0, 6—3.

Young McGrath, who uses both hands in making his backhand shots, played great tennis in defeating Vines, his variation of pace and length frequently forcing the American into errors. Vines' cannonball service held little terror for him, the youngster frequently making returns of what appeared to be sure "aces."

Shields to Face Hall In Canada Net Finals

Montreal, Que., Jan. 27 (A.P.).—J. Gilbert Hall, of South Orange, N. J., and Frank Shields of New York, reached the final round of the Canadian Indoor Tennis Championships today.

By LEWIS F. ATCHISON.

EASTERN assumed the lead in the interhigh school basket ball series yesterday when it was outfumbled by Roosevelt in a poorly executed but interesting series game at Tech. The final score was 31-24. Tech's representatives were turned loose on Western later in the afternoon and managed to roll up 56 points to 19 for the opposition, a feat that established the Maroon and Gray in third place.

Eastern now has only to hurdle Tech and Western to be assured of at least a tie with Central for the championship. Should Tech defeat Central and Eastern a triple tie will exist, but if it wins from Central and loses to Eastern the latter will have undisputed claim to the crown.

Bassin Makes Important Basket.

Harry Bassin, who flips the ball with his left hand, scored the basket that righted Eastern when the team threatened to capsize in the storm raised by the Roughriders. It was a southpaw shot, made going away to the side of the hoop and gave Eastern a 24-22 lead, which it never relinquished.

Only a few moments before the rangy Jewish youth replaced Al Waters in the line-up, Huck Cavanaugh, outstanding Roosevelt player, had knotted the count at 22-22 with a pair of field goals in one two order.

Eastern was guilty of the worst possible basket ball at times. The ball slipped through the players' hands, their shots were awry, and their defense ragged. The expected relapse after its spirited work against Central was very much in evidence.

Roosevelt was no better. The teams staged a neck and neck race endeavoring to outfumble each other, and as the score shows, Roosevelt won. The defeat eliminated Roosevelt from all mathematical possibility of winning the title.

Tech amassed a 22-1 lead on Western in the first quarter, which is something of an all-time record. MacPherson sank a foul shot for the West End quintet and was immediately removed from the game, evidently because he made the rest of the team look so bad.

Official Scorer Goes To Sleep.

A nudge in the ribs of the official scorer about an hour and a half later was his first intimation that Western had scored a basket. There was some talk of stopping the game for a victory parade, but no one could be found to lead it.

Western had 4 points to 36 for Tech at the half. Jimmy Corcoran and Bieri led a rally near the end that moved the score to 19, while Tech's third, fourth and fifth stringers were running theirs to 56.

Coach Artie Boyd's new starting combination of Billings, Wheeler, Olverson, Daly and Thomas looked good while they were in the fray, toying with their opponents like a cat playing with a doomed mouse.

Navy Quintet Host Today To Md. U.

Maryland Underdog in Court Battle at Annapolis.

MARYLAND UNIVERSITY sets out to sink the Navy in basket ball today at Annapolis, but the pregame betting has decided that if any sinking is going to be done, it is the dear old Old Liner that must be salvaged after the court proceedings. Play will start at 2:30 p. m.

Armed with a quintet of 16-inch shots, notably Borries, great all-around Middie athlete, Navy has one of its greatest teams this year both from a shooting and passing standpoint and only Penn has been able to turn it back. Navy already has one Washington scalp on its belt, that of American University, against whom it doubled the score.

Victors by a 27-15 count last year, Maryland can expect no such fortune today. Gone are the stars who helped mold last year's win—Bozie Berger, Shorty Chalmers, Eddie Ronkin, et al., and in their places are a determined, but not very naturally gifted outfit, the mastheads of which are Bucky Buscher, dependable guard, and Spider Chase, a spasmodically brilliant forward.

Maryland Team Inconsistent.

Maryland's 1933 record is one of ups and downs. The squad upon occasions has risen to heights, and if it can recall those moments today may make matters warm for the Annapolis boys, but otherwise it is expected to be but aonther page in the deficit side of Maryland sports ledger.

Locally, American University and Gallaudet will tangle at American University at 8:15 o'clock in one of those rare intracity games which Washington sportsgoers demand often but so rarely receive from the college bodies. The teams are rather well matched, with the odds in favor of American, which boasts of two fine basketers in Oscar Sells, loose-jointed center, and Glad Williams, 6-foot-2 forward.

Gallaudet again pins its hopes on Capt. Brown, sterling forward and one of the leading players the school has turned out in recent years.

Sarazen Leaves Coast; 8-Inch Cup Tests Due

Los Angeles, Jan. 27 (A.P.).—Gene Sarazen, American and British open golf champion, has shaken the dust of California off his feet, but he left his 8-inch cup idea behind.

Two southern California clubs will make a test case of the enlarged cups. The Brentwood Country Club of Santa Monica, just a short distance from the hospital where Sarazen, from the sick bed, made his idea known, will hold a two-day tourney with the 8-inch cups beginning tomorrow.

Joe E. Brown Figures In Kansas City Deal

Kansas City, Mo., Jan. 27 (U.P.).—E. Lee Keyser, Des Moines baseball magnate, and several others today purchased the Kansas City Baseball Club of the American Association from George and Carl Muehlebach. The deal has been pending some time.

Tris Speaker, former big league luminary, will be manager and have an interest. Joe E. Brown, motion picture comedian, will be a vice president. Bill Rodgers, Des Moines manager for two years, will become club secretary. Keyser will be president. Players and franchise were purchased for $40,000, it was announced.

Chisox Sign Former Virginia Polytech Star

St. Charles, Va., Jan. 27 (A.P.).—Charles Beuford Wax, catcher for Pennington Gap in the Lonesome Pine League last season, and a former V. P. I. athlete, said today he had accepted a contract to join the Chicago White Sox.

Vote Is No

Bobby Jones, in Hollywood, to Make Films, Frowns on 8-Inch Cup.

Hollywood, Jan. 27 (A.P.).—Bobby Jones, grand slam champion of golf, accompanied by his family, arrived in Hollywood today to make a second series of golf instruction motion pictures.

The golf star made his initial appearance in films a year ago.

The former open and amateur champion of the United States and Great Britain cast a negative vote on Gene Sarazen's suggestion that the size of the golf cup be increased to 8 inches.

"It might make an interesting game," said Bobby, "but it would not be golf."

JOE JUDGE.

Judge's Feats Here Recalled; to Receive $10,000 Salary.

By BOB CONSIDINE.

JOE JUDGE is gone.

So far as the thousands of local fans who knew and loved him are concerned he has met one of those fates which the novelists darkly hint is "worse than death." He has been switched to Brooklyn. There is about as much chance that he will ever appear here in a regular league game as there is that Washington will meet the Zulu lacrosse team on a home and home basis.

Joe Judge wasn't a first baseman for Washington after 1918; he was as much of an institution as Washington's two other claims to national attention, underground trolleys and Walter Johnson. He was the idol of every kid in the city who didn't want to be a pitcher. He was the joy of thousands of mortals who look upon savoir faire in sports as important. He had the most poetical throwing arm of any infielder of all time, only approached by Hal Chase.

Judge's Transfer Long Due.

The boys around the cracker box at the ball park office yesterday paused in their pinochle to look at the sodden snow and muse upon the going of Joe. The death rattle of his Washington career had been audible for two years, while the gangling and clumsily efficient Joe Kuhel improved with the rapidity of a growing mushroom. Everybody knew Judge was due to go, but the actual going comes as a shock. Doubtless there were still hundreds of Washingtonians who hoped that through some impossible manipulation of waivers, trades or the stopping of baseball's relentless wheels he might again take up his stand at first base at Griffith Stadium, the post he honored since 1916.

It would take a mathematician to compute the players who have been brought here to win his job away from him. There was Turkey Brower, now out of baseball; Eddie Onslow, ditto; Frankie McGee, ditto; Joe Harris, ditto; Mule Shirley, now in the Southern League; George Sisler, coaching baseball at Hot Springs; First Person Singular Shires and then finally Kuhel. All of them failed, save Kuhel, who allied himself with two despotical baseball sceptres. Approaching Age and Uncertain Legs.

Joe has plenty of baseball left in him. Griff, the man who facilitated his easy entrance to Brooklyn by erasing the $7,500 Brooklyn would have to pay the Washington Club for Judge, says he has at least two more years of first rate play stored up in his venerated chassis.

We'd like to see those last two

EAST CREWS MAY RACE ON COAST

By ALAN GOULD
(Associated Press Sports Editor).

NEW YORK, Jan. 27 (A.P.).—Along the Eastern naval front today the response was quick and in some instances distinctly favorable to the proposal for a national intercollegiate championship regatta over the famous Olympic rowing course at Long Beach, Calif., this June.

Cornell and Syracuse, in response to an Associated Press inquiry, both reacted favorably to the idea, which involves a proposition for Southern California interests to underwrite the regatta to the tune of $50,000 and furnish a Far Western substitute for the cancelled Poughkeepsie races this year:

Other rowing colleges, including Princeton, Pennsylvania and Columbia, refrained from taking any definite position on short notice, in the absence of more specific information about the details, but Henry Penn Burke, of Philadelphia, president of the National Association of Amateur Oarsmen, suggested the Penn Athletic Club eight would be willing to go, if invited.

Penn A. C. Considers Trip in 1934.

The Penn A. C. already has under consideration a trip to the coast in 1934, to race the University of California on the Oakland Estuary. California scored a one-fifth second victory over the club crew in the finals of the Olympic tryouts last year at Worcester.

At Cornell, where rowing enthusiasm has taken a rebound and insured a competitive program this spring despite the university's economy move, Head Coach Jim Wray said: "I think it's a perfectly fine idea, if it can be arranged. It would be a good sporting event. We would like to go if we could get faculty permission."

Prof. Charles L. Durham, faculty crew representative at Cornell, also reacted favorably and gave assurances that the university authorities would give serious consideration to a definite invitation.

Syracuse Reported In Favor.

At Syracuse, the response was much the same, unofficially. It was pointed out that a guarantee covering all expenses of a transcontinental trip would remove the main obstacle and permit favorable action by administrative officers.

While noncommittal today, Columbia and Pennsylvania might consider invitations to go to the Coast, but for various reasons the other Eastern rowing colleges, Yale, Harvard, Navy, Princeton and M. I. T., would not be available.

Yale and Harvard have their own private affairs to settle on the historic Thames at New London, late in June, and will not extend their naval campaigns beyond that. Princeton's policy also is opposed to postseason engagements, although the short-distance feature of the Long Beach proposal would be in accord with Tiger views. However, Asa Bushnell, Princeton's graduate manager, said the Far Western suggestion "seems impractical."

VENZKE GETS FIRST TEST OF 1933

BOSTON, Jan. 27 (A.P.).—Gene Venzke, the sensational Pennsylvania freshman who raised havoc with the mile record last season, will make the first of his four 1933 indoor starts tomorrow night in the twelfth annual Prout memorial meet in the Boston Garden.

The Pottstown flash started his record-breaking streak in this meet's Knights of Columbus mile feature last season. His 4:15 1-5 victory, although slow when compared with his other 1932 miles, set a track record.

Edwards to Start In One Race.

Venzke will line up with a brilliant field, which may be further enhanced if Phil Edwards, who was good enough to win thirds for Canada in both the Olympic 800 and 1,500 meters ever a decides to start. Edwards, now a graduate student at McGill, has entered both the mile and cheverus "1,000." He has notified Mert officials he will start in but one of them.

Venzke, however, is sure to be extended by one or more of the other entries for the field includes J. W. Turley of Yale, Ed Cahalan, Bay Estes, and Bren Moynahan, all of the Boston A. A., and Arthur Foote and J. F. Scheu, both of Harvard.

Edwards, if he decides to try the "1,000," will meet with plenty of opposition in that event as Georgia Bull

SHAKER LADY SCORES BY SHORT NOSE IN MIAMI FEATURE

Filly, at 18-1, Wins Drive To Wire

Modern Times Best in Fifth as Sunfire Disappoints.

HIALEAH PARK, Fla., Jan. 27 (A. P.).—One of the closest finishes of the meeting materialized with the running of the Suwanee purse, a 7-furlong test for fillies and mares which headed the program here this afternoon. Shaker Lady, a 4-year-old representing D. B. Midkiff, barely lasted to take the purse by a nose from C. V. Whitney's Moon Shy, ridden by Hank Mills. Fervid, representing Mrs. J. M. Black, took third money, a length and a half behind. The winner paid $37.40 for a $2 dollar ticket and her time was 126 3-5.

It was anybody's race nearly all the way. Memories Dear, breaking better than usual from the inside, rushed to the front in the first furlong but she was unable to shake off Shaker Lady. Meridian Queen and Porter's Dream until straightened out in the stretch. Then the pace-maker faltered in the drive to the wire and Shaker Lady got her head in front. Moon Shy, badly outrun for half a mile made a belated bid on the final furlong and the result was in doubt until the official numbers were hoisted.

Form Players Hard Hit By Sunfire.

Favorite players were hard hit by the failure of Sunfire in the mile and a quarter of the fifth event. The 8-year-old son of Olambala was beaten three lengths by modern times and pulled up very lame after the finish. Workless was third and a half length farther back. Modern Times reached the front after leaving the back stretch and easily held sway the remainder of the trip. Sunfire was a bad last most of the journey but closed resolutely on the outside of his field in the stretch. The winner returned $6.20.

E. R. Bradley's green and white silks flashed to victory in the curtain raiser when Bobbing finished with a rush to score by a length over Opinion. Sky Haven, the pacemaker, lost the place by a half length. Bobbing broke on top but Sky Haven was allowed to cut out the running. The Bradleyite challenged in the stretch and after getting to the front held Opinion safe to the end. The well-played Le Bruyere had little chance after being shuffled back at the start and pocketed. Bobbing paid $11.60.

Doette Wins Baby Race For Field Players.

Field horses accounted for the whole pot in the baby event with Dartle, Chinese Custom and Wise Ways, all outside position horses, finishing in the order named. Dartle won by a length and a half while a head separated second and third. Dartle was quick to get in motion and maintained a daylight advantage virtually the entire quarter mile. Wise Ways forced the early running and lost the place to Chinese Custom in the final strides. The field paid $3.30 straight.

General A., one of the most consistent sprinters in training, exhibited a fine show of speed and gameness to annex the third purse. The $4.50 for $2 favorite reached the pay-off station a length in advance of Mountain Elk with Wise Count a half length away from the place. The Point, General A. and Vishnu raced heads apart to the head of the stretch where General A. drove clear. Mountain Elk, which appeared to stumble at the start, came with a belated rush on the outside to beat Wise Count for the place.

AT THE POST

DEAR AL: MIAMI, JANUARY 27.

The pressbox gang gave me the razzberry this afternoon when Drastic Delight, my longshot special, ran eighth in the colsing race, and they're laughing louder now that the equivalent odds show the gelding was 385 to 1. However, they failed to take into consideration that Drastic Delight beat Banderlog, the pressbox consensus, by some four lengths. Don't think I was giving you a dream horse. Old Drastic is going to do it—and soon. I know you'll get no such odds as they'll be putting up here, so I'll slip a deuce on for you the next time he's in his own company. If you see or hear of Mike tell him to come back. All is forgiven.

BILL.

FIRST RACE—CONTRIBUTE failed me the last time, but I'm sticking right along and feel we will be rewarded with a victory at a good price. JUDGE SCHILLING may run his race and take the place. SEA FOX showed a wake-up the last time, as I have oft warned, but seems ambitiously placed here.

SECOND RACE—SLAPDASH won impressively here the other day and seems the logical choice in this, although there's always the possibility of that untried long shot registering. DOMINO PLAYER, another that has a win to his credit, to take the measure of BITTY BITE for the second money.

THIRD RACE—GOLD STEP to take 'em until he misses. This one has performed sensationally here and there is no indication that there will be a let up. MR. SPONGE is coming along in the trials and may be ready to crack down. FINITE is improved and may take the show.

FOURTH RACE—CHARACTER is another that goes for me until that winning streak ends, although I take this stand with full knowledge that JUNGLE KING is ready for some brilliant racing. GOLD BASIS to show.

FIFTH RACE—LARRANAGA gets in a mile race this time and may be picking up CHIEF JOHN and the other speedsters in the stretch. The latter won in beautiful style here earlier. FARDEE to take care of the others.

SIXTH RACE—VILLAGE VAMP is a tough little thing when ready, and that place the other day seems to point to top condition. Needs a heady jockey. HAGGERSON and IMPEACH to battle it out for the second money.

SEVENTH RACE—WISHING STAR should go right back and win. Likes the distance and the track. ALCMAN to do the principal chasing. HAPPY PLAY may take the show end.

LOTT DOWNS MANGIN AT MIAMI

East's Singles Champion Defeated in Semifinals.

MIAMI, Fla., Jan. 27 (A.P.).—George Lott, jr., of Chicago, advanced to the finals of the all-Southern tennis championships here today, defeating the Eastern singles champion, Gregory Mangin, of Newark, N. J., in a semifinal match, 6—4, 7—5, 6—3.

Bryant Grant, jr., of Atlanta, and Clifford Butler, of New Orleans, battling desperately for the right to oppose Lott for the title, were tied at two sets each, and Grant was leading 5—4, in the fifth and deciding set, when darkness settled over the Miami-Biltmore courts.

Lott exhibited spectacular tennis in trouncing Mangin.

A high wind that whipped across the court much of the play interfered with placement shots. Lott won the first set easily, and ran out the second, after the game score was 5-all, by winning the eleventh and twelfth games.

A furious battle developed in the third set. Lott won the first game after deucing it and appeared to have the situation in hand when he won the second game at love, but Mangin won the third game and carried the fourth to deuce six times before Lott won.

The fifth game was at deuce 10 times when Mangin took a fault and then Lott scored the deciding point with a beautiful placement. Lott also won the sixth game before rain halted the match for 10 minutes. When they came back Mangin won the next two games and was leading 40-love in the ninth, when he lost his service and saw Lott run out the game, set and match in consecutive points.

British Praise Bostwick's Riding

London, Jan. 27 (U.P.).—To a young American, G. H. (Pete) Bostwick, goes the palm for being the best amateur jockey in England.

"Pete" is the younger brother of A. C. Bostwick, owner of many smart race horses, including Mate, a winner of the Preakness Stakes, the Arlington Classic, and which ran third in the Kentucky Derby.

The London Evening News racing expert, "Beaufort," describes young Bostwick as the nearest approach he has seen to Fred Rees, admitted by all racegoers over here as the best cross-country jockey of recent times. "Bostwick," wrote the Evening News expert, "has a splendid combination of skill on the flat and over fences, which makes him 100 per cent efficient."

Young Bostwick's ambition is to ride a Grand National winner. Last year he returned to America before the big Aintree race, but this year he is planning to remain over until after the event on March 24. While no definite riding plans have been made so far, Bostwick may have the mount on Mrs. Ambrose Clark's crack steeplechaser, Kellsboro' Jack.

TAKOMA S. S. WINS.

Takoma-Silver Spring High School defeated Rockville High School by a score of 45-22 in a lop-sided game yesterday at Takoma. Pritchard, Leizear and Clark starred for the winners. The victory sent Takoma into a tie with Bethesda-Chevy Chase for the lead in the Montgomery County scholastic series.

Radio Dial Flashes

By ROBERT D. HEINL

THE advices from Warm Springs that President-elect Roosevelt will probably merge the Federal Radio Commission into a general communications bureau, as a companion to a new transportation bureau, caused no great surprise to those who have been watching the situation. Apparently the President-elect is following the idea of the Couzens communications bill.

Senator Couzens has long advocated combining the regulation of radio, telephone, telegraph and cable companies, taking from the Interstate Commerce Commission the rate-fixing jurisdiction over telephone and telegraph rates.

President-elect Roosevelt, however, would evidently go a step further than Senator Couzens and include power in the new set-up, having the communications bureau take over the present functions of the Federal Power Commission as well as the Federal Radio Commission.

Giuseppe Verdi's opera "La Traviata," based on Alexander Dumas, fils', well-known novel, "La Dame Aux Camelias," will be broadcast in its entirety from the Metropolitan Opera House in New York City over WRC at 2 o'clock this afternoon.

Lucrezia Bori, dramatic soprano, will sing the prima donna role and Lawrence Tibbett will have a leading part in the four-act opera.

Milton J. Cross will act as announcer for the opera, which will be sung in Italian. Tullio Serafin will conduct, and the cast will be as follows:

Violetta, Lucrezia Bori, soprano; Flora, a friend, Elda Vettori, soprano; Annina, a friend, Philine Falco, soprano; Alfredo, Armand Tokatyan, tenor; Giorgio Germont, his father, Lawrence Tibbett, barytone; Gastone, a Parisian, Angelo Bada, tenor; Baron Douphol, Alfredo Gandolfi, barytone; Marquis d'Obigny, a Parisian, Millo Picco, barytone; Dr. Grenvil, James Wolfe, basso.

THE ALEXANDER CHAMBER OF COMMERCE, through Dan S. Hollenga, takes up the cudgel against the removal of the new WJSV transmitter which the Navy Department claims is seriously interfering with radio work having to do with national defense now in progress at the Naval Research Laboratory.

"1. At the time WJSV petitioned the Federal Radio Commission for permission to erect Station WJSV there was already in existence the Naval Research Laboratory.

"2. The Federal Radio Commission informed the Navy Department that they had received an application for the erection of a radio station somewhere between Alexandria and Washington. It is immaterial to whom the notice was mailed, as long as it was addressed to the Navy Department, and if perchance it did not reach the Naval Research Laboratory, the Federal Radio Commisison can not be blamed. The Navy Department should have forwarded the notice to the proper official.

"3. The officials of the Columbia Broadcasting System complied with every legal step required by the Federal Radio Commission in the selection of the site, construction of the transmitter and its operation.

"4. Upon receipt of the notice from the Federal Radio Commission the Navy Department took no action.

"5. The officials of the Columbia Broadcasting System waited 20 days after the construction permit was granted to give time for any protests whatsoever to be filed with the Federal Radio Commission. No protests were filed, and consequently, the construction of WJSV was started.

"We can not see why the Navy should now file objection and request a hearing on February 15 before the Federal Radio Commission for the abolishment of Station WJSV, in which a large sum of money has been invested."

PHIL COOK admirers in Washington will be disappointed to learn that Station WRC was unable to arrange the local schedule so that Phil's one-man circus program, "Under the Big Top," might be broadcast locally.

The Phil Cook show, which begins at 6:45 o'clock and lasts a full hour, may be heard over WEAF direct (660 kilocycles), WFI, Philadelphia; WFBR, Baltimore, and WBEN, Buffalo.

Senator James F. Byrnes, of South Carolina, who is said to be close to President-elect Roosevelt, will speak on "The Democratic Party's Opportunity" (WJSV, 10:15 o'clock) tonight.

Addition of Station WSYR, Syracuse, N. Y., to the networks of the N. B. C. will be the occasion for a special program of welcome at 11 o'clock tonight, heard over WRC.

The preparation of scenarios for radio programs is developing into a big business. One concern alone prepares the script for 50 radio programs a week. With 20 copies of each script needed, the following staff is required: Ten stenographers copying author's manuscript; one "traffic" girl to follow through; two duplicating machine operators; three proofreaders; one broadcast checker to watch for ad libs, and eight or more creative authors, plus several executives.

PROCEEDINGS of the thirty-fifth annual banquet of the American-Irish Historical Society will be broadcast over WOR, Newark, from 10:15 to 11 o'clock tonight. The speakers will be Michael MacWhite, Minister Plenipotentiary of the Irish Free State, and William T. Collins, justice of the Supreme Court of the State of New York.

Marguerite Cromwell, soprano, will sing "Just an Echo in the Valley," "Neapolitan Nights" and "I'll See You Again," accompanied by Rudolf Schramm's orchestra (WRC, 7:30 p. m.) tonight.

Cyril Maude, English actor-manager who is one of the most distinguished veterans of the dramatic stage in this country, will reveal many of his richest theatrical recollections during a transatlantic broadcast from London, to be relayed over WJSV on Sunday, February 5. . . . George Dada, Central American composer and vocalist, will be heard in a special recital of his own compositions, accompanied by a typical string orchestra of guitars, laouds and mandolins (WJSV, 4:15 o'clock) this afternoon . . . Ravel's arrangement of Moussorgsky's "Pictures at an Exhibition," "Brigg Fair," an English rhapsody by Delius, and Symphony No. 5, by the Finnish composer Sibelius, will be played by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Serge Koussevitzky conducting, WJZ network, 8:15-10:15 tonight).

Morton Downey slipped out of the studio after a broadcast. It was exactly 10 p. m., as he spied Ralph Kirbery, the dream singer, in the corridor.

A wild automobile dash followed to an Elizabeth, N. J., theater, where Downey put on his act, then dragged Kirbery on to the stage, introduced him to the audience and made the surprised singer perform. Then followed an equally mad dash back to the studio for Kirbery's midnight program. Downey wanted to know if it was all right. "Sure," Kirbery answered, "but I was scared to death. That was my first vaudeville appearance."

Bob White
The Old Philosopher
SAYS:

Question: I have an eternal fear of losing my job. Every time I am called to the superintendent's office I expect to be fired. I know of no reason for this, for no one can point a finger at me and as far as I know the firm is satisfied with my work. Tell me how to get over being afraid.

Answer: There is always a reason for fear. Your fear may be due to the condition of your health—a state of nervousness maybe. It may be that you have an inferiority complex. Whatever it is, find out, for with this obsession you will never advance far in business. First of all, ask yourself what is there to fear. Likely nothing. That decided, dispel it from your mind and fortify yourself that whatever happens they can't kill you . . . and this is not the only job in the world. If you can hold on to this, not letting it, of course, make you impudent, you will find a keener interest in your job and fear will not enter your mind. Believe that you are just as important in that organization as is the superintendent. Get closer to the heart of things there and see how soon you will be recognized. If you have an idea for the betterment of the business, go to your superiors and tell them. They may pooh-pooh it, but it will give you an opportunity of showing them you are interested in your job and this knowledge to you will give you courage. "Never strike sail to fear. Come into port grandly or sail with God the seas."

Bob White, the old philosopher, will answer an outstanding question each week day on this page. He is heard twice daily over WMAL at 8 a. m. and 4:30 p. m.

Alexandria High Beats Rival, 37-26

Special to The Washington Post.

Alexandria, Va., Jan. 27.—The largest crowd to see a basket ball game here this season jammed its way inside the armory here tonight and was treated to a thrilling struggle in which Alexandria High School defeated its old rival, Washington-Lee High School, of Ballston, 37-26.

Harold Chilcott, a guard, saved the game for Alexandria with his deadly pot shots which accumulated the tidy sum of 18 points. It was Chilcott who put the home team ahead, 19-17, at the half after the Little Generals had assumed a 9-5 lead in the first quarter, and it was he, together with Nugent, who ran the score to 30 in the third period when Washington-Lee scored but one point.

Good and Bunch were outstanding for the Ballston quintet.

Alexandria will play Fredericksburg High School on the latter team's court next Friday for the championship of the Third District.

KING OF THE JUNGLE

by CHARLES THURLEY STONEHAM

SYNOPSIS.

When Kaspa, the lion man, found as a child by Kali, the lioness, and raised by her together with her own cubs, Ruka and Dogo, is chased away from the family by Bulu, a newcomer, because he lacked the lion's claws and fangs to defend himself. he finds a substitute for those lion's weapons in a knife which a native hurls at him. Experimenting with this new weapon, he kills a young bull in the native's stockade. The natives with packs of dogs trail him into the forest and, in a terrific fight, Kaspa puts them all to rout, killing and mangling many of them. They go back home telling wild tales about a lion god in the shape of a man. In the meantime Kaspa, elated with his success, goes back to settle an old score with Bulu.

CHAPTER VII.

IN the middle of one of the small glades down in the thorn country, the lion family were gathered about a zebra kill, not yet cold. Bulu and Kali ate slowly and discriminately; the younger lions lay watching, for their leader had not overcome his distrust of them sufficiently to allow them to share his meal while he was yet occupied in eating it. Their turn would come later. They awaited it with dignity that did not conceal their distaste at this cavalier treatment.

At a faint sound from the bush both heads turned enquiringly. Kaspa stood there silently observing them. He had heard the hunting-calls and the triumphant roar at the zebra's death. His keen nose had soon led him to the feast. Both the young lions grunted a greeting, at the sound at which Bulu spun round and faced the intruder with lifted lip. Kaspa drew his knife and came forward, disregarding the growl with which Kali declared her adherence to her new mate. He faced Bulu at 3 yards' range and snarled a direct challenge at him. Bulu roared and attacked. It was a rush and a leap. Kaspa sidestepped the leap, and as one sweeping forepaw hooked at him he met it with outstretched hand and, resisting its pressure, allowed himself to be flung aside as light and surefooted as a dik-dik, but in the instant when that paw had touched him he had driven the knife through it just above the elbow.

Bulu whirled, roaring. He crouched, watching his antagonist, whom he had discovered to be both elusive and deadly. How he had sustained the wound in his paw he did not know, but he was sure that Kaspa had inflicted it. Kali made a sideways rush at her one-time cub, intent upon chasing him away from Bulu, whom she found to be as much to her liking as Paka had been. Kaspa evaded her by a narrow margin. He had been expecting an attack from that quarter.

Taking advantage of this demonstration in flank, Bulu charged again, and this time he was more difficult to avoid. A flailing paw descended upon Kaspa's head, and though he guarded it by allowing its force to slide down his extended arm, it drove him to the ground. Bulu's body reared up to crush him beneath its weight, and Kaspa slipped sideways, out from under, at the same time driving the knife into his opponent's ribs. Bulu went fighting mad. He rebounded from the ground like a ball, and, like a ball, went bounding after his elusive enemy to and fro across the clearing, startling the night with his furious voice. Kaspa, quicker than he, and baffling his desperate lunges by springing toward and past him at an acute angle, used his knife like a chopper and scored several hits on the massive paws that struck him. Kaspa's good fortune did not last; he cannoned against a thorn, lost his balance, and was knocked into the grass. Bulu was upon him before he could get away. The lion placed restraining paws upon him and reached for his throat with gaping jaws. This was the crisis which Kaspa had feared.

His strength was insufficient to keep the lion's head back, and he knew that he must deliver a mortal stroke at once while he was still able to profit by it. With a great effort he drove the knife to the hilt in the lion's throat where it joined the chest. Then he grappled the killer's arms and, wedging his shoulder beneath his chin, hugged him as tight as he could. Bulu, stricken to death, was unable to loosen that clutch. He rolled over with his enemy, pulled up his hind legs and threw Kaspa across the clearing. Kaspa came to his feet at once, but Bulu did not rise to meet him. The lion lay gasping and struggling like one in a fit. In a few moments his struggles ceased and he straightened out, dead. Kaspa, with distorted face and laboring lungs, stood watching, ready to dodge and fly on the instant, but as no movement disturbed his fallen enemy he sprang forward and retrieved his knife.

Kaspa lay three days in his hiding place. His legs healed quickly and gave him little trouble, but his strained chest was a more serious matter, which mended itself slowly. On the fourth night he roused himself and left his shelter. He had neither eaten nor drunk during his period of recuperation, for sleep had not wasted him, and shade had conserved the moisture in his body. He felt stiff and sore, but energetic and hungry. His first duty was to drink his fill at the stream, then he attempted to roar the announcement of his recovery, but, finding it pained him, he did not persist. He walked slowly up into the thorns, trying with ears and nose to locate the pack.

Midnight found him still wandering. He hungered but had not killed. He was not strong enough to run down a buck; there were no forest trees and narrow game paths here to facilitate the leopard's tactics, and the moonlight was too brilliant to make stalking easy. He saw no sign of his friends until near dawn, and then it was the slouching form of Ruka crossing a clearing. Kaspa called to him, and the call brought Dogo into view. The three of them gathered in the clearing and exchanged news.

The young lions were outcasts, it appeared. After the death of Bulu, Kali had gone off down-river and attached herself to a pack under the sway of an old blackmane named Guru. Guru had not welcomed the intrusion of Ruka and Dogo into his circle, and they had been forced to fend for themselves.

Kaspa told them about the finding of the knife and his battle with the dogs. He announced that he was now a great fighter and afraid of no lion; he could kill Guru if he wished to. They assented—look what he had done to Bulu. It was obvious that he was a great chief among lions. They examined the knife, but could not make much of it. It was a man-made thing and, as they had no hands, outside their ken, Kaspa suggested to them that they should form another pack—three young bachelors, sufficient unto themselves. They assented, but pointed out that they had no hunting ground nor any wise leader to direct their movements. Kaspa averred that henceforth he acknowledged no leadership but his own; that he had a good district—that place where he had obtained the knife and where Paka used to spend the dry weather, and that if his brothers cared to hunt under his leadership, they might do so, but if not he would hunt alone. The young lions were impressed by this independence. They were tired of wandering about the hot thorn country, submitting to the insults of Bulu and Guru and other old lions who, not having reared them, did not feel any friendship for them. They declared for the bachelor pack and the leadership of Kaspa.

That night after they had finished the young buck killed under Kaspa's leadership and descended to the river to drink, by ill luck they encountered Guru and his pack—three males and four females, including Kali. The black-mane, having learned of Bulu's death, was determined to possess his hunting ground, which was richer in game than his own. He did not consider the claims of the two young lions worthy of consideration, but he opened his eyes when he saw their companion and learnt from Kali this was Bulu's slayer and her own cub.

Guru had passed a part of his life in contact with man. He thought he recognized man despite the lion smell, and of man he was terribly afraid. Instead of standing his ground and warning the weaker party to beware of him, he turned and slunk into cover with uneasy haste.

Kaspa allowed the man-laugh to wrinkle his face at this tribute to his power. That he, the hairless cub who had once been the weakling of the pack, should have become so formidable a creature as to cause a great chieftain like Guru to turn tail without hesitation at the mere sight of him, was flattering to his sense of importance and the new-found confidence in his ability to hold his own with all comers. He stalked up the bank past the deserted Kali and her friends without a glance at them, and behind him came Ruka and Dogo, his stanch adherents once more, and a force to be respected under their redoubtable leader.

They lay up in a thicket that day, and at night, having satisfied their hunger with the remains of the impalla, set out for the hills. In three days they reached their objective and settled down in Paka's old den, a place of pleasant memories. Game was plentiful. The Bomogo removed themselves from the vicinity of the cave when they knew that the lion-god had returned, and with their departure went the only enemies that the lions need fear.

Life was interesting and pleasurable for the next three years. Kaspa perfected his methods of hunting and gained in strength and speed. Ruka and Dogo grew to their full power and stature and soon brought home two fine lionesses as their mates. This made Kaspa the leader of the pack of five efficient lions and he became a power in the land. King of the Nyoka Plains, he flourished until the great drought came and life became a serious business.

With the grass turned to stubble and the streams all dried up, the game slowly drifted away out of the district in search of new grass. There was little successful hunting and hunger set in. Other lions began to drift across their hunting-ground in search of game and at night the hungry roaring of desperate beasts arose on all sides. Kaspa would not trek because the lionesses, being with cubs, were in no condition for a long journey. Flanks grew thinner, coats grew dull and tempers short. The lions turned to the Bomogo manyatta for food.

The natives were also in a desperate plight. There was no grass for the cattle and dozens of lions prowled around the boma at night seeking to steal their charges from under their noses. The Bomogo strengthened their boma and increased the height of the stockade so that it was proof against lions. It was not proof against Kaspa, but having climbed in and made his kill, he could not get the carcass out to his friends. The natives never molested him. They had learnt to distinguish his voice, and when he roared they sought the shelter of their huts and crouched there, banging their drums to scare him away. But though he could provide for himself, the other lions had to go hungry.

They began to attack the cattle herds while grazing on the veldt in broad daylight. The Bomogo resisted and several lions and some natives were killed. In desperation the Bomogo dispatched a deputation to the commissioner at Nyoka, 70 miles away, begging him to protect them from the ravages of savage beasts.

Thus it was that Martin Sefton made a report to his superior which occasioned that gentleman considerable surprise.

STRANGE but fitting markers are used in one of the Italian national cemeteries near the Austrian front, where Italy suffered her greatest losses during the World War. Many of the graves are marked with the equipment of the soldier buried there. So it is that the grave of an office attache is marked with the very typewriter he used in his work.

An old war-time searchlight stands over the grave of the soldier who operated it and who was killed in action at its controls. The camp cook's grave is marked with a mobile military kitchen. Members of the naval battery are buried beneath torpedo, anchor and anchor chains.

Even if little Miss Maureen O'Connell wanted to cry she could not make it very impressive, for the tears that mark the orthodox manner of weeping would be wholly lacking. She was hurt in an automobile accident and her tear ducts had to be removed. Deprived of her ability to cry, Miss O'Connell sued in a Los Angeles court and was awarded a $5,000 verdict for her injuries.

Although it is often written with a modifying word, "unique," by its own definition, can not be modified. "Unique," according to the dictionary definition, means "being without a like or equal; single in kind or excellence." Anything, then, is either unique or it is not, and nothing can be more unique or less unique than another thing.

THE ONCE OVER

By H. I. PHILLIPS

BIT THE DUST.

TECHNOCRACY, as represented by a Columbia University group, has dropped Howard Scott, thus proving that even under that system nobody's job is certain.

In fact, the Columbia professors drop not only the Emir of Ergs, but scrap the name of the movement. They will call it something else, just as millions of Americans have been doing for months.

* * * *

Mr. Scott still claims to be the only man who understands what it is all about, however, and will exhibit technocracy under his own management, refusing all offers to merge with the jig-saw puzzle industry.

* * * *

In the experiment of dropping Mr. Scott from the tall towers of Morningside Heights to gather statistical data on how far he would bounce, there is a suspicion the Columbia technocrats were influenced by pressure.

* * * *

Originally technocracy was merely using Columbia as the tail of its kite, but the thing got out of control to such an extent that Columbia was being accused of being the fond daddy of the movement to save America by letting everybody work four hours a day and paying off in certificates of energy.

* * * *

The country, running around in circles, completly groggy through its efforts to understand a new system, which would make everybody happy by abolishing money, began to wonder whether Columbia was a university or a playground for discontented squirrels.

* * * *

So associated in the public mind did Columbia become with technocracy that President Butler saw the danger of its big benefactors stopping cash payments on new buildings and sending the treasurer energy coupons.

* * * *

First came a complete disownership of the ergs and joules movement by Dr. Butler, and then came the ousting of Mr. Scott and technocracy as such by his Columbia playmates in the mystic maze of scrambled ergs.

* * * *

Mr. Scott's theories about the country being a victim of machinery still stand. Particularly when it comes to road rollers and automatic dumping equipment.

REFERRED TO MR. EINSTEIN.

Our idea of a Master Mind is a fellow who can do a jig-saw puzzle and read a speech on currency inflation while the radio broadcasts an explanation of technocracy.

"Borah Wants Inflation."—Headline. Give him the gas, boys! !

REAL PATRIOT.

Ima Dodo is so sold on the Buy American movement that at a party the other night she refused Swedish punch.

Such is life. Mr. Howard Scott, head man of the technocracy movement to keep men at work, is the first man to lose his job through it.

At last the United States has done away with the ancient custom of requiring a four months' delay before the victors in a national election can climb into the driver's seat. It would seem to indicate that idiocy is not necessarily permanent.

Dr. Smart Guilty In Operation Case

Dr. Benjamin H. Smart, for 40 years a practising physician here, was convicted in the District Supreme Court yesterday of having performed an illegal operation. He was immediately remanded to jail by Justice Daniel W. O'Donoghue, before whom he was tried, to be sentenced next week.

An indictment charging Dr. Smart with performing an illegal operation on a young girl who subsequently died was returned against him several months ago. The physician, whose home is at 237 Rhode Island avenue northwest, maintained the girl had been treated by persons in Virginia and had come to him after certain medicines had been administered her.

When her condition grew worse, a surgeon was called in and the girl was operated upon at Sibley Hospital. She died the day following the operation. Assistant United States Attorney William H. Collins prosecuted Dr. Smart and Lucian Vandoren and D. Edward Clarke defended.

Dance Halls Assailed; Starlings Also Opposed

Condemning "taxi" dance halls as leading to immorality, members of the Anacostia Citizens Association, meeting at the Methodist Church Hall at Fourteenth and U streets southeast, last night adopted a resolution advocating that the license for "ten cents a dance emporiums," be revoked.

The association also reiterated their stand in favor of an elective school board and favoring vocational schools. They adopted a resolution advocating the amendment of the bird sanctuary laws of the District, in such a manner that the city could take steps to get rid of the starlings. Dr. George C. Havenner, president of the group, presided.

Baby Gaining Ground With Screw in Lung

With a slight improvement noted in the condition of 15-month-old Yvonne Wilmar, who is fighting pneumonia at Children's Hospital with a screw in her lung, Dr. Frank Leech, chief of the hospital staff, last night said that the colored child would probably be removed to Philadelphia Monday or Tuesday, to have the foreign body removed by Dr. Chevalier Jackson.

The child got the screw in her lung passages about ten days ago while playing at the home of her parents at 774 Harvard street northwest. She developed pneumonia and is now resting in an oxygen tank, critically ill.

REALTY UNIT FAVORS FORMING INSTITUTE TO STUDY PROBLEMS

National Boards Association Installs New Officers; Banquet Is Held.

Tentative plans for formation of an American Institute of Property Management were approved by the property management division of the National Association of Real Estate Boards, meeting at the Willard Hotel yesterday. They will be forwarded to the directorate of the national association for action at a later meeting. The proposed institute would concern itself chiefly with management agencies and apartment building problems.

It would have two classes of membership, active members being those substantially engaged in property management. Its objective is the creation of proper standards and uits for accumulation of operating experience, so that proper comparison can be made to improve efficiency of management operations. It would also provide data to enable appraisals on income capitalization basis to be made more accurately than can be done on piecemeal data now available, it was explained.

Three more chapters of the American Institute of Real Estate Appraisers were chartered at a meeting of that organization. They are Nos. 3, 4 and 5 for Ohio, New York and California, respectively. Chapters already have been formed in New Jersey and Florida.

Banquet Is Held.

Following a day of divisional meetings, the delegates assembled at a banquet last night at which W. C. Miller, president-elect of the national association, head of the firm of W. C. & A. N. Miller, local realtors and builders, was inducted into office by L. T. Stevenson, Pittsburgh, retiring president. Other national officers and directors present also were inducted.

In his inaugural address, Mr. Miller said the depression should not be feared as "we shall emerge from this one as we have from many others." The profession should work with hope instead of fear, he said, and should be more active in its attack against present conditions.

Retiring President Stevenson said from now on the profession must build on a new plan and adjust itself to a new era. In this change the business of real estate must take such action as will preserve for the future what is of greatest moment to the country today, the savings of the people represented in the American home.

Taxes and Income.

Speaking on his survey of local apartment buildings prepared in connection with the recent senatorial rent investigation in the District, Rufus S. Lusk, local statistician, told a meeting of the property management division yesterday that one of the most constructive facts brought out by the Washington Real Estate Board's report was the relation of real estate taxes to the income of apartment buildings.

The tax rate in Washington, he said, is $1.70 a $100 and the assessment is about the full market value. Taxes absorbed 12.5 per cent of the gross income of these buildings and was responsible for 19 per cent of the operating costs. They amounted to 11.1 per cent of the rent schedules and equalled approximately 35 per cent of the net income, before interest, of every building.

Called Tremendous Burden.

"Few realized," he said, "what a tremendous burden real estate taxes are until this report was completed. The ownership of any sort of investment property is a business. Because of the ease with which real estate taxes can be collected and the impossibility of escaping their payment real estate has been 'soaked' by most taxing authorities.

"What would automobile manufacturers or chain store companies say if they had to pay 12½ per cent of their gross income or an amount equal to 35 per cent of their net income in taxes before interest? Yet that is precisely what owners of investment properties are paying in Washington today. And the probabilities are that our taxes are no higher than most other cities. Obviously this condition can not continue. Real estate is not being taxed, it is practically being confiscated."

Henry G. Zander, past president of the national association, chairman of its committee on Federal legislation and chairman of the board of the Home Loank Bank of Evanston, Ill., addressing a joint meeting of the mortgage and finance and home-builders and subdividers divisions, asked for support of the Home Loan Bank System.

WAMPLER HEARING DEFERRED TO FEB. 8

Federal Attorney Withdraws Remark Angering Lawyer Accused in Tax Case.

Over the strenuous objections of Government representatives, United States Commissioner Needham C. Turnage yesterday continued until February 8 a hearing on the removal of T. Morris Wampler, member of the District bar, to Baltimore to face charges of evading the income tax laws for 1930 and 1931.

Wampler himself injected into the hearing yesterday a colorful incident when he arose menacingly and called upon Assistant United States Attorney Charles G. Page, of Baltimore, to retract a statement.

"There are a number of witnesses in this case, as Mr. Wampler well knows, and the need for haste in bringing the matter to trial is apparent."

The significance of that statement aroused Wampler. Arising from his seat and advancing toward Page, he shouted:

Page withdrew the remark and the trouble was smoothed over.

William E. Leahy, attorney for Al Capone, appeared on behalf of Wampler and said that he desired to call at least 100 defense witnesses in the defense hearing. He said that he would have to go to Atlanta, Ga., shortly to represent Capone in an appeal, and he asked for a continuance until his return.

Leahy indicated that Wampler would launch a determined fight to avoid going to Baltimore for trial.

"Be Careful!"

FALL AT RESEARCH CENTER KILLS CHILD

H. D. Krafft's Son, 5, Victim; Police and Coroner to Investigate Today.

Toppling approximately a dozen feet from a second floor banister at the Child Research Center yesterday afternoon, 5-year-old Billy Krafft, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harold D. Krafft, of 3347 Tennyson street northwest, was fatally injured.

The child was not seen to fall, as far as police could learn last night. He was found just after 1 p. m. by attendants. He was taken to Emergency Hospital, where he died about four hours later.

Besides Mr. and Mrs. Krafft, two brothers, Harold D., jr., 10, and Frederick, 7, survive Billy, whose full name was William Hayne Krafft. The body was removed to the Joseph M. Gawler undertaking establishment last night, but no funeral arrangements had been made.

Pending issuance of a certificate of cause of death, Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald said he would accompany homicide squad detectives to the scene of the accident today for an investigation.

Mr. Krafft is in the insurance business.

More Snow Today, Weather Man Says

Fair and Colder Predicted, With Tomorrow Fair and Warmer.

Snow will fall this morning, the weather man predicts. But it will only be light and the clouds will clear away before evening. The weather will then be fair and colder. Tomorrow will be fair and warmer.

The storm that visited the Capital yesterday, bringing snow in some sections, sleet in others, and rain in others, will be the last for the next few days.

Accidents during the bad weather were unusually few. Reed Harris, 32, colored, of 1607 New Jersey avenue northwest, was seriously injured when his truck collided with the car of Joseph A. Brucker, 35, of Towson, Md., at New York avenue and Bladensburg road northeast. He was treated at Casualty Hospital for a fractured skull.

Two men were injured when their car and another collided on the Seventh Street pike near Norbeck, Md. They were taken to Montgomery County General Hospital at Sandy Springs, Md., and identified as Otis Smith, 20 years old, of Gaithersburg, Md., who is believed to have a fractured skull, and Waldo Halterman, 30, of Laytonsville, Md., whose finger was broken.

Speakers on the after-dinner program will include Senator George McGill, Phil P. Campbell, former representative from the Third District; W. C. AUTOMOBILE SHOW WILL OPEN TONIGHT

Washington will get its first chance to see the automobile industry's contribution to better motoring in 1933 in the thirteenth annual automobile show, which opens tonight in Washington Auditorium. Twenty-eight makes of passenger cars and a wide variety of accessories and services identified with motoring will comprise the display, the scope of which will show no shrinkage in spite of the depression.

While the opening of the show to the public will not take place until 7:30 o'clock this evening, a preview will bring 300 special guests of the Washington Advertising Club to the Auditorium this afternoon. This formal preopening ceremony will be preceded by a luncheon at the Raleigh Hotel. Fred A. Britten, member of Congress from Illinois, will preside at the luncheon and Roy D. Chapin, Secretary of Commerce, will be the principal speaker.

A reduction in the admission price was announced last night by the Washington Automotive Trade Association sponsoring the event.

This reduction, together, with the award of a new automobile every night of the exhibition, is expected to boost attendance to the record level attained last year.

The chief emphasis of the show, of course, will be placed upon the passenger car display. Every conceivable standard and special body type is listed among the more than 125 cars for which space has been reserved.

The Automobile Show this year will be open every day from January 28 through February 5. Week-day schedules call for the doors to open at 10:30 a. m. and continue until 10:30 p. m. Sunday hours will be from 3:30 to 10:30 p. m.

Heads Win

Policeman Breaks Baton and Gun to Subdue Fighter.

When he broke his baton on his man's head and failed to stop him, Private J. J. Hunter thought his stick probably was defective—but when a blow on the head with his service revolver only ruined the revolver, the policeman gave up that method of attack and shifted to wrestling tactics. He tossed the man to the ground and sat upon him until help arrived.

While patrolling his Third Precinct beat yesterday afternoon, Private Hunter saw four colored men in a free-for-all fight at Seventeenth and O streets northwest. He raced to the scene, but on his arrival two men quit the fight and fled. The policeman attempted to take the other two into custody, but one of them resisted. While Hunter was subduing him, the other man escaped.

After treatment at Emergency Hospital for a slight scalp wound the prisoner was booked on charges of disorderly conduct and assault. He identified himself as Harry Wells, colored, 1413 T street northwest.

MAN HURT IN BLAST OF CHURCH BURNER

Covered with flaming oil when the oil burner at St. Martin's Catholic Church, North Capitol and T streets, backfired, R. A. King, 34, of 3418 Fourteenth street northwest, yesterday was severely burned about his face, arms and chest.

The man was doing some repair work on the burner. He tried to tear his burning garments from his body, while screaming for help. A priest at the church came to his assistance.

Rushed to Sibley Hospital, the man was treated for second degree burns in the emergency room and transferred to a ward. Late yesterday, the man is said to have become irate, claiming he had not been given food. He caused so much trouble in the ward that police were called and he was removed to the emergency room and later transferred to Gallinger Hospital.

King told police he had been given nothing to eat at 7 p. m., though he had been in the hospital since 11 a. m. He said his demands for food were refused.

Dr. Warren Burk, resident physician of the hospital, assumed entire responsibility for the case. He said the man was badly burned, highly nervous from shock, and in no condition to assimulate food. He said he intended to start giving him nourishment this morning.

Petrified Pearls Riddle Reported

Coal and Stones Found in Package Supposed to Contain Gems.

A problem of pearls that turned to stone while en route to the Bureau of Fisheries was yesterday turned over to the Postoffice Department for investigation.

The bureau had received a letter from S. P. Marion, of Berkley, W. Va., stating that he was sending 21 pearls, which he had found, for valuation. Elmer Higgins, chief of the scientific inquiry division of the bureau, replied that the bureau was not equipped for such research.

However, a registered package with a letter explaining that the 21 pearls were within arrived. When opened it was found that the package contained 21 pieces of stone and one lump of coal. Officials wrote Marion of the contents of his package, but have received no reply.

Butcher Pleads Guilty To Short Weight Sales

Ellis Levy, proprietor of the Washington Meat Market, 1506 Seventh street northwest, pleaded guilty before Judge Ralph Given in Police Court yesterday to information filed by the District department of weights and measures, charging sale of short-weight meats in twelve instances.

The prosecution resulted from an investigation conducted throughout December, following receipt of complaints by the District department. Sentence was reserved until February 3. The maximum penalty is a fine of $500 and six months in prison.

Winning two blue ribbons, a second prize and a third, Allen Hechter's horse Ask Him last night was judged the champion hunter of the District Night Horse Show at the Riding and Hunt Club.

Mr. Hechter, a Baltimorean, placed his mount first in the straight hunter and the Corinthian classes. Ask Him registered second place in the handicap jump and made third in the ladies' hunter event. This third place was possibly the greatest win of the evening, as the ladies' hunters provided the cleanest jumping of the show.

Performances last night were generally rather unfinished, the horses not having had enough work during the day to take the edge off. Bad weather was indirectly the cause of many a poor performance, having prevented exercise during the day.

Classes Are Large.

The inclement weather, however, failed to deter the galleries, which were more crowded than at any of the previous shows. The classes, too, were much larger than usual, fifteen horses in one event being not unusual last night.

Other winners in the first class were A. B. Hagner's Magnum, who won against the other 2-year-olds, and Robert Guggenheim's Firenze Nogiree, who won in the 3-year-old class. The Chestnut Farms Dairy entry won the draft horse prize, while the fifth winner was Norman Clark's Merry John.

Karl K. Is Winner.

The saddle class was divided into two divisions, one for the thoroughbred type and one for the park type. The latter division called for three or five-gaited animals. Eugene Meyer's Blossom placed first in the park type, followed by Merry John, belonging to Norman Clark, jr. and Bobby Lee, owned by Norman Clark, sr.

In the thoroughbred division Karl K., the Melvin C. Hazen entry, walked off with first prize, followed by Maj. W. M. Grimes' mount with the yellow and Mrs. William G. Hill's Questionnaire with the red.

F. L. Oyster's 3-year-old colt Lonely Boy took first prize in the handicap jump, over a 3½-foot barrier. Ask Him was second, while Francis Lee's Irish Rose went out of the room with the red ribbon.

Life of Riley Victorious.

Miss Elizabeth Martin and William Carter won the fifth class, for the best pair of saddle horses. Miss Martin rode Norman Clark's Peacock, while Carter's mount was Blossom. Second place went to Maude Priest on Harriet Lee and Robert Roby on Jack Lightning. Margaret Cotter, riding Sweetheart on Parade, and George P. Mahoney on Copper Head took the two red ribbons.

Maj. Grimes' Life of Riley was ridden to victory in the Ladies' hunter class, while Mrs. Hill's Questionnaire took the second prize and Ask Him the third.
